Mrs. Harbison Dies

Mrs. J. S. Harbison, of whose serious illness Index noted last issue, died Saturday evening at 3 o'clock.

Funeral services were held at the late residence Sunday evening at 3:30, by Rev. Tom Green.

The remains were taken to Arizona for interment, leaving Irving Tuesday morning, accompanied by the husband, and by the mother and sister—Mrs. H. A. Hills and Miss Jessie Hills—who came here on summons to the death-bed.

Although a resident of Irving but a few months, Mrs. Harbison had won herself a sphere of "respect and esteem" among her neighbors, who were deeply touched at the seemingly untimely death of this young woman.

Index was handed this short biography:

Mona Adelaide Hills was born in Nebraska, February 22, 1888, but was reared at Hulbert, Okla. Three years ago, with her parents, they moved to Douglas, Arizona. There she met Mr. J. S. Harbison, and they were married on May 9, 1907. They came to Irving December 8, 1908. She died here March 18, 1909.

Accidental Killing

While out hunting Saturday evening in the vicinity of Sowers, "Sonny" Irvin, 12 year old son of Mrs. Odom of Dallas was killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the hands of his companion, Will Gilbert, also about the same age.

The charge of shot shattered the boy's elbow and entered the abdomen. The wounded lad was taken to the home of Mr. Bietendorf and Drs. Gilbert and Haley were called in. Dr. Gilbert's son was visibly affected, and plead with his father: "For God's sake, save his life if you can."

Dr. Gilbert summoned Dr. Samuel of Dallas, and all possible was done for the unfortunate boy, but he died Sunday morning about six o'clock.

Interment was made in the Sowers cemetery Monday morning.

To lend sadness to the accident, the mother of the boy killed was a widow, and was visiting a sick sister on Dr. Gilbert's farm.

It was a shock to the community, and a blow to Dr. Gilbert's family as well as to the boy's mother.

Mrs. J. B. Parker died at her home near Elm school house Tuesday evening, after an illness of only a few days. The remains were buried at Shady Grove cemetery the following day. Deceased was about 45 years of age, and leaves a husband and several children to feel the loss of her love and care.
On March 30th, at 6 o'clock a.m., Mrs. Mollie Parker died at her home near Elm School House, leaving her beloved husband and eight children ranging in age from four to twenty-one years.

Sister Parker had only been sick three or four days. It is quite a solace to the bereft family and friends to know that the broad hand of God's mercy was with this good wife and mother, as her entire illness was calm and seemingly painless. So when death came the noble soul crossed the chilly waters without a tear. Sister Parker lived to love and be loved, and at the youthful age of sixteen she heard the call of Christ, and answered by putting on Christ in all his commands, and for 28 years lived closely in the faith of Christ; and this faith never failed her in the serene hour of death. The noble work of this good wife and mother was richly manifested by her aged companions and loving children at her deathbed and grave.

A large concourse of friends and people followed the remains to the Shady Grove cemetery, where they were laid to rest, having ceased from all their labors of 44 years on earth.

The funeral ceremonies were appropriately conducted by Rev. Dr. L. Comto.

The bereft family have the sympathy of the entire community.

Death of J. C. Pruitt

Again that "Grim Monster, Death," has stolen into our ranks. The wife and family of J. C. Pruitt, formerly a farmer of the Irving community, but for the past two years proprietor and manager of the Dallas Curtail Laundry, have been called to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. The deceased, while perhaps not entirely recovered from an attack of pneumonia last February, had for the last few weeks been able to be about, superintending his business. Death occurred suddenly. He had driven over town, and while not feeling well had succeeded in transacting all business for the day, and was about to return home; when suddenly attacked by heart failure. He died in his wagon in a few minutes after the stroke, and before a nearby physician who had been summoned by 'friends could arrive. The body was removed to his home in West Dallas, from whence it was later removed to Irving, where it was interred, amid the sobs of many friends and relatives of Dallas and Irving who had gathered to witness the last sad rites. The services were conducted by Rev. Cowington of Dallas.

The deceased is survived by a wife and two children, at Dallas, and two sisters at Bremond, Texas.

Mr. J. A. Taylor Dead

Mr. J. A. Taylor, one of Irving's staunch and highly respected citizens, passed away Monday morning. Irving citizens paid personal tribute of respect at the sick bedside, at the funeral and at the grave. Index yields to the following beautiful tribute in memory:

IN MEMORIAM

On Monday morning, Aug. 9, as Aurora's light was heralding a new sun, while the inhabitants of our little town and country side were just beginning to stir with the life of a new day, and our first thoughts on waking reverted to the home of a loved citizen, Brother J. A. Taylor, expectant yet fearing, surprise was evident nowhere, that the Death Angel had brought the dread summons that the kind and affectionate husband, the loving father in that house, was wanted in Heaven; that the Father had said, It is enough, His sufferings must cease, his joys must begin. His home is ready.

For 22 days he had suffered with a complication of diseases—his health had been failing for many months—and when at 7:55 a.m. the end came, while the blow to his family, relatives and friends, was so hard, expected though it was, there is the sweet consoling thought that our loss is his eternal gain.

None who knew Brother Taylor in the latter portion of his life can doubt his Christian character. He professed faith in Christ and was baptized fifteen years ago in Kaufman county. He loved to talk of religion, of his Heavenly Father, while his Bible was his constant companion.

He was born Jan. 7, 1856, and his early boyhood was spent in Kentucky and in Rutherford County, Tennessee, near the battlesacred Murfreesboro. He came to Texas in his middle teens and his father purchased, in 1861, the Sowers place on which John Lanette now lives, familiarly known as the old Taylor place, and though he has lived a few of the intervening years in Wise and Kaufman counties, the greater portion of his life was spent here, in what is known as the Forks of the River.

His magnetic ways and generous heart, won for him an immeasurable host of friends, and every community that he entered welcomed him as sincerely as a preceding one regretted losing him, and the beautiful, hospitable, friendly little town of Irving mourns its loss of him while it knows his place can never be filled.

His dear, good, heart broken wife, Mrs. Tryphena Taylor, and four sons, Willie, unmarried and living at Grand Prairie, Tom, Grady, and little Grady, one sister, Mrs. Anna Pollard, near Grand Prairie, three brothers, Ben Taylor of Irving, Will of Colorado City and Booker of Iowa Park, survive him, while he has joined his parents, two sisters, his brother Lee Taylor, and a little daughter Lula, in the Beautiful City of Gold.

His family, his sister and brothers were with him in his illness, but a few days before he died Will and Booker were compelled to return home on account of their families, while Ben and Mrs. Pollard remained to aid in administering to his wants and smooth his pillow till his light went out. His nephews, Brooks Pollard and his niece, Mrs. Ida Black of Kaufman county, with her husband were also present during the last hour.

At 7 o'clock a large concourse of friends and relatives started with the loved remains to the Baptist tabernacle, where his loved pastor, Rev. Tom Green of Dallas, conducted the funeral services, after which the long procession wended its way to the Sowers cemetery where the remains were interred with Protestant honors.

May his loved ones, who have been the burden of his prayers, strive to meet him where there is no parting and the many good friends, endeavor to show by their kind words and kindly deeds how much his sister, Taylor, is appreciated, and how lighten the burden of her sorrows, while they admonish his boys to consider that they have the option of again grasping that loved hand that beckons from the other shore.

Sammie Thomas, a negro, about 23 years old, was lynched at Shreveport Saturday evening by a mob of nearly 500 white men and boys for attempting assault upon little Jennie McMillan, 7-year-old girl.
Mr. and Mrs. Braden Tillery had the sad misfortune to lose their infant boy, Otto E., Saturday night last, and the remains were interred at Lago, at 4 p.m. Sunday. Funeral services were held by Bro. Leroy Anderson at the home on First Avenue, and Consul Commander Calvin Reed and Manager Hawkins of Lagow Camp W. O. W. No. 2160 were the pall-bearers. Though but an infant, due respect was paid the dead by the order—Sov. Tillery being a member of the Lagow degree team. At the regular meeting of the Camp on Monday night last resolutions of respect and condolence were read and passed.
Death Calls Pioneer

Mr. John Trigg, seventy-eight years of age and most of his life a resident of this vicinity, was stricken with paralysis at his home near Sowers on Monday of last week, from which shock he died Tuesday, September 29. Truly deceased was one of the pioneers of Dallas County. Mr. Trigg is survived by his wife and several children, one son being the popular Deputy Sheriff Hayden Trigg. The funeral and interment was at Sowers cemetery Wednesday evening, attended by many pioneer and younger friends and neighbors. Index extends the feeble comfort of its sympathy to its friend Hayden Trigg and the others of his family.
