

Gable Dies After Suffering Attack

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) --The entertainment world Thursday mourned the passing of Clark Gable, "king" of the movies, who in his final picture scoffed at the fear of death by saying "dying is as natural as living."

The handsome 59-year-old Gable died peacefully of a heart attack at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital Wednesday night, four months before the birth of his first child. He was happily looking forward to fatherhood as an unexpected "dividend" late in an eventful life.

His blonde wife, Kay, 42, rushed to the bedside of the dying actor but arrived moments after his death. The pregnant Mrs. Gable, who also suffers from a heart condition, was placed under the care of a physician at her Encino estate.

Gable died on his tenth day in the hospital, a day which was considered his best since entering.

Early Irvingite, E. Gebert, Dies

In his 80th year death has claimed one of Irving's oldest and best known citizens. On May 23, Emil M. Gebert died while he slept.

Gebert moved with his wife and family, which then consisted of two children, to Irving in 1913 from Coryell County. They located on a prairie farm northwest of Irving, located on Beltline Road and bounded on the north by Hindley Road. It was there three more children were born, and also that in a house in the pasture of the Gebert farm was organized a German baptist Church where many of the German families from the Irving community and the western part of Dallas County worshipped. Gebert made the benches for the congregation. It was some years later that the church was disbanded.

A familiar sight on Sundays was that of Mr. and Mrs. Gebert and their family, which had now grown to two daughters and three sons, in their surrey going into Irving for worship services.

In 1945, Mrs. Gebert preceded her husband in death. One daughter, Adina, is married to A. E. Randle, and the second daughter, Hilda, is now Mrs. R. O. Wilson. With two sons, John and Willie, in the service, Gebert continued to farm, alongside his other son, Alvin, who now makes his home on the Beltline farm. It was on this same farm that in 1947, Gebert was thrown from the seat of a plow when a team of horses suddenly lurched forward. This accident resulted in his breaking his neck and suffering some muscle damage to his hands and legs. It was the better part of a year before he was sufficiently recovered to actively pursue a much-loved pleasure of visiting old acquaintances and taking small trips to see long-remembered friends. Some three years ago a serious illness struck Gebert.

Gebert leaves his five children, 19 grand children, eight great grand children, one brother, Adolph Gebert of Gatesville, and one sister, Mrs. Emma Kieke of Freeport. Services were held May 24 at the First Baptist Church in Irving. Burial followed in Oak Grove Memorial Park.
