Vet Golfer Dies Wed.

WILMINGTON, De. (UPI) -- Porky Oliver, 48, veteran pro golfer and a cancer patient since May, 1960, died Wednesday at Memorial Hospital.

The former 240-pound linksman had been in and out of the hospital during his 16-month illness. He had returned there last July 25 after developing a kidney infection.

In his prime, the popular Oliver had won a number of tournaments, including the Western Open, the Bing Crosby Invitational, Phoenix Open, St. Paul Open, Texas Open, Tacoma Open and the Kansas City Open.

"You just have to pray and have faith," Oliver said at one stage of his losing battle with cancer. His primary concern had been for his wife, Clara, and their four children.

"They're all taking it fine; taking it in stride," the golfer had said of Mrs. Oliver and their sons, Ed III, Robert and John, and their daughter, Jo Ann.
