Jets Collide; Two Are Killed

GRAND PRAIRIE -- An Arlington man was one of two pilots killed here Friday afternoon when two jet fighters collided during landing exercises at Hensley Field. A witness said the planes collided over Mountain Creek Lake near the end of a Hensley runway.

One of those killed was First Lieutenant George A. Teddlie, 30, of Arlington, a National Guard pilot. The other victim was identified as Marine First Lieutenant Alexander P. Longdon, Jr. Longdon's home address was not immediately known.

Teddlie was piloting an Air National Guard F-86 fighter. Longdon was in an F-8U Crusader assigned to a Marine fighter squadron stationed at Buford, South Carolina. Both planes fell into the water after the collision. The bodies of the two men were recovered at 3 p.m., an hour after the collision took place.

Navy officials said that the F-8U Crusader was among other F-8U's "in normal flight pattern for landing." The F-86, said the same officials, was on a "touch and go" landing and take-off exercise.

Bob S. Burton and Bob Hughes, Grand Prairie businessmen, said they witnessed the spectacular crash.

"We both saw it and couldn't believe it," Burton said. He said that a third plane had been in the immediate area of the collision.

Teddlie resided with his family at 2110 Cloverdale in Arlington, and was the son of R. E. Teddlie of Houston. Besides his father, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Drue Teddlie, a son, David, 2-1/2, and a nine month old daughter, Donna.

Lieutenant Longdon is survived by his wife, Joyce, and daughter, one year old.

Teddlie was a pilot for Central Airlines, and had lived in Houston until moving to Arlington 14 months ago. He attended the University of Houston and was born in Harlingen, Texas.

Longtime Resident Killed by Gun Blast

A 68-year-old Irving woman, reportedly depressed over failing health, put a 12-gauge shotgun to her head and killed herself around 10:30 a.m. Monday.

Grand Prairie Justice of the Peace E. C. King ruled the shooting a suicide.

The woman was Mrs. Lottie Mae Toler, 2100 Toler. A pioneer resident of Irving she was found lying in bed by her husband, Levi Toler, 77.

Mrs. Toler apparently tied one end of a string of cord to her bedpost and the other end to the single-shot shotgun's trigger, placed the gun on her forehead, and leaned back with the gun, setting off the discharge at point-blank range.

Police told the News Texan that Mrs. Toler allegedly had talked of suicide about two months ago, but her son, Lloyd S. Toler, talked her out of it.

The gun that killed Mrs. Toler belonged to her husband, who reportedly bought it 35 or 40 years ago. Police said that both Mrs. Toler and her husband have been in poor health for a long time.

Mrs. Toler was a life-long resident of Irving. Her family name is imprinted on the history of Irving. Irby was her maiden name, and a street in central Irving was named after that family.

Toler Street was named after her husband's father, and to this day, the street is thickly populated by the Toler family. Local relatives and friends may be counted by the score.

The body is at Black's Funeral Home. Funeral arrangements are still pending.

Girl Killed In Horse Accident

Kay Trammell, 10, a former resident of Irving, was killed Tuesday, after being drug by a runaway horse.

The little girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Trammell, who lived for several years at 1002 Arawe Circle. They now make their home in Austin, scene of the fatal mishap. They have lived there for the last six months.

Reports as to just how the accident took place vary widely, but the most reliable source indicate that the girl's foot got entangled in a lariat, hanging from the horse. The horse had just fallen and was spooked.

Funeral services have been set for Friday in Austin.
