

Attack Fatal to Faulkner

OXFORD, Miss. (UPI) -- Literary giant William Faulkner died of a heart attack Friday in the rural Mississippi surroundings which he brought to the world in novels hailed as among the greatest of the 20th Century.

The 64 - year - old Nobel Prize winner passed away at 2 a.m. with his wife, Estelle, at his bedside. A family spokesman would say only that he died in a local hospital.

The Bourbon - sipping Faulkner, who invariably cast himself in the role of the southern gentleman, was fond of riding to the hounds and had been in ill health since he suffered a fall three weeks ago.

His death was the second of a great American writer in a little more than a year. Ernest Hemingway died in Idaho July 2, 1961.

President Kennedy led the world in paying tribute to Faulkner, whose novels included such well-known works as "The Sound and the Fury," "Sanctuary," "The Unvanquished," and "Absalom, Absalom."

Kennedy called Faulkner one of the "great creators of this age" and said Faulkner through his works had sought to "illuminate the restless searching of all men."

Plane Crash Kills Two

FREDERICKSBURG (UPI)—A single-engine airplane crashed and exploded Friday 16 miles north of this hill country town, killing two Austin men.

The sheriff's office identified the victims as Robert W. Ferrell who was the pilot and was an auditor for an insurance firm and John H. Lambert. Both men are from Austin. Lambert was operator of Lambert's Prosthetic Devices, an artificial limb company.

Both men were in their 40s.

A search party who found the wreckage scattered over rough ground in the enchanted rock area of the hill country said the plane had exploded on contact. The two men were the only occupants.

The crash occurred about 7:15 a.m., deputy sheriff Lawrence Burrer said. A search party pushed to the scene hours later.

A hunter and a landowner in the area said they heard the plane hit, but there were no eyewitnesses to the crash. The weather was overcast and foggy at the time, sheriff's deputies said.

Train Hits Pickup Truck

HIGGINS, Tex. (UPI) -- A freight train hit a pickup truck at Higgins late Sunday night, knocked it into the city's train depot and killed all four men inside.

"I just wadded the pickup truck into a ball of iron," deputy sheriff Earl Mead said.

Killed were Jerry Fields, 21, of Gage, Okla., Herbert S. Jenkins, 52, Kenneth Joe Ward, 25, and Willard P. Duggan, 26, all of Shattuck, Okla. The men were oil field workers returning home from their jobs.

Mead said the truck caught fire and in turn set the station on fire. The fires were quickly controlled.

"The truck apparently just drove in front of the train," Mead said.
