McCord Autopsy Ordered

The body of Morris McCord Jr. was found beside a 12-gauge shotgun in the garage of his home at 1312 Lindhurst Thursday afternoon.

Justice of the Peace Lloyd Russell has ordered an autopsy.

According to investigating officer Bill Drake, ~~one shell had been fired into McCord's~~ mouth.

McCord's wife and two children were asleep inside at the time of his death. They were not awakened by the shot, nor did any of the neighbors report hearing it, Drake said.

Mrs. McCord went to the garage about 1:40 to show a pick-up truck to a prospective buyer, and when she opened the garage door she found the body just inside.

Beside McCord was a note saying "Call the police first, then look in the brief case."

On the hood of the car in the garage was a brief case with a longer note inside, part of which was dated the 12th, part the 14th and part apparently scrawled in pencil Thursday.

Drake guessed that the death took place between noon and 1:40.

McCord was an inspector at Texas Instruments in Dallas, and had left work earlier Thursday to bring his check home and take care of some financial business. He was seen leaving the Irving Bank and Trust around 11 a.m.
