Pioneer Buried In Family Plot

Tom Haley made his final trip down Sowers Rd. Saturday afternoon.

The long funeral procession for the pioneer Irving leader terminated at the Haley family cemetery about a mile west of Belt Line Rd.

Along the route from South Delaware Church of Christ, scenes abounded to review the early life of the man who was a prime mover for good schools here in the early 1900's.

~~The former school board president died at his residence~~

dence on Robin Hood Dr. about 1 a.m. Friday morning. At 91, he has enjoyed relatively good health until he took a serious cold about three weeks ago. He never shook it off.

"The passing of Tom Haley closes the life of a man who probably contributed more talents to the Irving school system than any other individual," Harry E. Spencer Jr., president of the school board, stated Saturday.

Funeral rites were held within a block of the site of the old red brick building, built in 1913 on $15,000 in bonds voted by the residents of Irving during the Haley administration.

The procession to the place of burial took hundreds of friends and relatives past the Sowers School, the old Sowers Store location, and the wooded grove where communitywide picnics once were held.

Haley once joked with a News Texan writer about the extent of his education. "I got as far as B-a-k-e-r in the blue-backed speller," meaning that work on his father's farmland kept him from getting the type schooling which he later helped secure for others.

The old Sowers school was described as a 30 by 60 structure, consisting of hand-hewn oak timbers, held together by wooden pegs. "There were holes between every stud-in, big enough for a cat to crawl through," Mr. Haley recalled.

At the cemetery, pallbearers assisting with the casket included the husbands of six of the Haley grand-daughters: Lenwood Barton, Ed Wilson Jr., Melvin Diggs, Sam Cooper, John Zaun, and John Huffman. The Leach Funeral Home was in charge.

Mr. Haley was preceded in death by his first wife, the former Fannie Tompkins, who grew up on the old Tompkins home place located where Storybook Lane is now situated on Highway 183. The young farm folks were married on Christmas Eve of 1891. They had been married 51 years when Mrs. Haley died.

The couple had six children including two sons, Dr. W. E. Haley and Frank Haley, and four daughters, Mmes. R. A. Gleghorn, J. C. Easter, Howard F. Parker, and G. G. Anderson.

Two years after the death of his first wife, Haley married Mrs. Clara Duncan Lemmons. She is among the survivors. Other survivors include one half sister, Mrs. Cora Caster and one half brother, Ben Haley.

Although his primary occupation was farming, Haley served for a time as county road supervisor for Precinct Four. He worked on many important projects, including the old Commerce St. viaduct. He also worked for the Rock Island Railroad.

Talking with a News Texan reporter about early day school matters in Irving, Tom

Haley made this comment which probably comes closest to summing up his leadership in education:

"We never had no kick nor fuss amongst the board, and we never asked the people for anything we didn't need."

Leroy Carver and J. Willard Morrow, ministers of the Church of Christ, which Haley served as an elder, officiated at the funeral and the graveside after the memory-filled procession down Sowers Rd. -- CHARLES LEWIS

~~Stunt Driver, Family~~ Dead From Shooting

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—A stunt driver, his wife and three children were found shot to death in their home Tuesday. A 16-year-old son was seized in a barn 20 miles away and charged with murder.

Authorities said Harry Hebard, a crew-cut, slightly built high school junior, was caught in the barn north of Green Bay as he tried to flee.

Police Chief Elmer Madsen had named Hebard as "the presumed killer" in the family massacre and launched a widespread search for him.

The bodies of Jack Hebard, about 38, his wife, Joyce, about 35, twin daughters Janet and Janice, 11, and John Ruckell, 15, each had a .22-caliber bullet in the head.

Police said they probably were killed with a pistol missing from Hebard's collection. A count of murder in the death of his father was lodged against young Hebard.

The bodies were found in the Hebard's remodeled farmhouse in a sparsely settled area of Green Bay's southwest side.

Dinner was on the stove, the table was set and the television set turned on when two detectives discovered the bodies.

Baseball Great Dies

CHICAGO (UPI) -- All-time baseball great Rogers Hornsby died Saturday.

Hornsby died at 10:05 a. m. CST in Chicago Wesley Memorial Hospital where he had been a patient since Dec. 9.

A hospital spokesman said death was apparently caused by a heart attack.

Hornsby had suffered a stroke last month while recuperating from surgery for cataracts.

The hospital spokesman said Hornsby appeared to be making a good recovery until Friday night, when his temperature rose suddenly.

WAXAHACHIE, Tex. (UPI) -- Paul Richards, general manager of the Houston Colts who both played and managed against Rogers Hornsby in the majors, said today Hornsby was "quite a player and one we are all going to miss."

"As far as I am concerned a lot of people resented Hornsby's attitude," Richards said, "but to me, he was really one man I liked to talk to, was very fond of him."

"One thing for sure, that is the only thing he wanted to talk about," Richards added. "As far as baseball players are concerned, Hornsby not only represented one of the great right-handed hitters the game has ever known, but he also was a top second baseman."

"You could hold him to a single if you pitched inside to him," Richards recalled, "but if you let the pitch get over the middle or outside he showed you his superlative hitting form."

DALLAS (UPI) -- Mike Higgins, executive vice-president of the Boston Red Sox, said today that baseball great Rogers Hornsby, who died today in Chicago, was a "fine baseball man."

Higgins said the Texas-born Hornsby was also a "very dedicated man--to baseball... and one very interesting to talk to."

"Hornsby was very opinionated, but they were good opinions," Higgins said. "I

Hornsby was 68 years old. He earned his place in the Hall of Fame as the greatest right-handed hitter in baseball history and was later a sometimes successful and always controversial manager. His last baseball job was with the New York Mets.

Hornsby's stroke caused partial paralysis of the left side. His condition was noticed Friday night and the end came quickly this morning.

Hornsby was certainly the most celebrated and successful in major league history and one of baseball's most controversial players.

Four times he was fired as manager during the season. He managed five major league teams and piloted the St. Louis Cardinals to the National League Pennant in 1926.

He three times batted over .400 in winning the National League batting championship.

He hit his personal high of .424 in 1924 and was seven times champion batter of the league. His lifetime average was .352.
