Husband kills infirm wife, self

DALLAS (AP) — A 75-year-old man who had been a caretaker for his suspected Alzheimer's-inflicted wife for three years killed her and himself in their nightclothes.

Mrs. Suberi, 75, had been shot in the head by her husband, who then killed himself, police said.

Mrs. Suberi suffered from Alzheimer's disease, which causes the brain to degenerate, resulting in early senility.

The couple had been together for 50 years.

A doctor at the Retirement Inn where the couple lived said Suberi's condition had declined recently and doctors had advised him to place her in a nursing home.

Suberi told her, two weeks ago the doctor had told him he had to put her in a nursing home, and he just wasn't going to let that happen.

"My father just couldn't live without her and he couldn't put her in a home," said the couple's son, Soloman. "He'd been very depressed."

Suberi had promised his wife with around-the-clock care for three years as the disease worsened, friends and relatives said.

"He's been waiting on her for three years, but the last two weeks he's been sick himself. He couldn't do it anymore," said Rose Pendley, a neighbor.

"She wasn't able to talk to anybody or walk by herself," said Marian Hume, a resident at the Retirement Inn.

Longtime Irving pastor dies

Longtime Irving pastor Elmer Sweat Sr., 65, died Tuesday, May 16, at The Irving Hospital.

He was born Dec. 15, 1929, in Bear Creek. His parents were Samuel and Viola Sweat, two original settlers of the Bear Creek area of Irving.

As a boy, Mr. Sweat attended Sowers Elementary School in Irving and Booker T. Washington High School in Dallas. He was a graduate of Southern Bible Training School, where he was ordained a pastor. He also was a member of the Hominy District Association.

The Rev. Sweat was pastor of Emmanuel Missionary Baptist Church in Bear Creek for 27 years. He built the small church, which sits on Gilbert Road, from scratch, with help from members of his congregation.

Sweat was a well-respected member of the community, known for his contributions particularly in the Bear Creek community.

Jackie Townsell, former Irving City Councilwoman from the Bear Creek area, praised Sweat for his work in the community, noting that she worked with him before the community was annexed by Irving in 1969. She called his death "a great loss to the community." Townsell said the Sweats were a pioneer family in the Bear Creek area.

Sweat was known as a caregiver for the poor. He often grew gardens at his home and gave all the food to those less fortunate. He did repair work to residents' homes and sponsored food drives.

Pastor Sweat ministered to several young ministers around the Metroplex and was known to be a great influence on them in their pursuit of stronger faith.

According to his son, Elmer Sweat Jr., The Rev. Sweat's death came as a shock to his congregation.

"What I gathered from the congregation is that it made us a lot stronger in the Lord. Also, for some it seemed like a self-examination of their own soul," he said.

Prior to becoming a pastor, Sweat was a pipe inspector. He also was a concrete and bricklayer, a skill he used to build his church.

Sweat is survived by three sons and daughters-in-law, Elmer N. Jr. and Barbara Sweat, James E. and Sharon G. Sweat and Melvin M. and Uela Sweat, all of Irving; daughter, Janit L. Sweat of Irving; four brothers; three sisters; five grandchildren; and a host of other relatives and friends.

"He was the best man I've ever known in my life. Every time something came up, he was able to handle it. He loved people and he loved kids," said his son, Elmer Jr. "He was a real private man. There were a lot of contributions that he made to the community that only the family knew about."

He was preceded in death by his parents and his wife, Mary Frances Fisher.

Services were held Saturday, May 20, at Emmanuel Missionary Baptist Church, with the Rev. T.W. Polk officiating. Burial followed at Carver Memorial Park in Ferris.

Arrangements were with Washington Memorial Funeral Home in Dallas.

Pastorship of Emmanuel Missionary Baptist Church will be taken over by another member of the Sweat family.
