Divorce triggers slayings

By LEE GRANT
Daily News Staff

A 38-year-old Irving man distraught about his pending divorce apparently shot his estranged wife and then killed himself, while the couple's two children played in the next room Sunday morning.

The bodies of Thomas Cleveland Jackson, 1914 Rock Island Road, and Gerri Jackson, also of Irving, were found in Thomas Jackson's apartment by a friend around 11 a.m.

Police speculated Jackson was unable to cope with the couple's pending divorce and killed the woman after he learned she was dating other men.

"What exactly set him off nobody knows for sure. She had been on a date the night before and he didn't like her dating. He couldn't accept the fact that she was dating," Sgt. A.G. Johns said.

Investigators found a handwritten note from Jackson in which he confessed to killing his wife, and then committing suicide.

"The note basically said he couldn't take it any more. That if he couldn't have his wife, nobody could and now they would be together. He said that he loved his kids and left instructions on who was to care for the children," Johns said.

Police spent the remainder of the day piecing together the events leading up to the two deaths.

The couple's two sons, ages one and three, were spending the weekend with their father at the time of the shooting.

Murder, suicide tied to divorce

Jackson telephoned the children's mother around 4:30 a.m. and told her one of their children was ill.

Instead of going to the apartment she instructed Jackson to give the child some aspirin, police said.

He called again at 7 a.m., this time telling her the child had a high fever and begged her to come over.

Finally, she agreed to come to the apartment to check on the child, police said.

Sometime between 7:45 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Jackson shot the woman once in the stomach with a .25-caliber handgun.

"He called a friend and said, 'You aren't going to believe this, but I just killed Gerri. Get over here and pick up the kids. By the time you get here I'll be dead,'" Johns said.

The friend rushed to the house and discovered the couple's lifeless bodies laying huddled together underneath a blanket on the living-room couch, Johns said.

Jackson had apparently shot himself once in the chest,

Police speculated Jackson had covered himself and his wife with a blanket to prevent the children from seeing the fatal injuries.

The children apparently did not hear the gunshots, and were unaware of their parents' deaths until police arrived.

Relatives and friends told police that the couple's three year marriage had been marred by cases of wife abuse, until it finally ended in separation in February

Police reports indicated the woman had filed assault charges against Jackson in 1982, but declined to prosecute.

The children were released to the custody of Mrs. Jackson's father of Plano, police said.

The shooting marked the 18th homicide in Irving this year.

Irving man dies of accident injuries

A 27-year-old Irving man died Wednesday from injuries sustained when he was struck by a pickup truck earlier this week.

Jae Kwang Jung, 3400 block of Coker Street, was pronounced dead at Parkland Memorial Hospital at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

Jung was fatally injured while walking along the 2200 block of North Belt Line Road about 5:45 a.m. Monday.

Police said Jung was walking in the northbound lane, with his brother on the opposite side of the way, when he was struck by a pickup truck driven by Paulino Rodriguez of Cedar Hill.

Police were unsure of where Jung was attempting to cross the street when he was hit. No charges are expected to be filed against Rodriguez, police said.
