Murder trial is this week

By LEE GRANT
Daily News Staff

Jury selection in the murder trial of Charles Hardin Murphy is scheduled to begin Monday in Criminal District Court No. 1.

Judge Ron Chapman is slated to preside in the trial.

Murphy, 38, was apprehended on May 30 when he was stopped for a routine traffic violation in Dallas. Officers then learned Irving Police Department investigators had issued arrest warrants for Murphy in connection with the March 1 death of Trent Collins Root III.

Root, 33, was robbed and then killed after a man and a woman forced their way into his 430 Hughes Street home.

Root's girlfriend was unharmed in the robbery and told investigators that she and Root were alone in the house when they heard a knock at the door.

Root opened the door and allowed a man to enter along with an unidentified woman, investigators said.

The man immediately displayed a handgun and demanded money and drugs from Root and his girlfriend, police said.

Root's hands were then bound with a set of handcuffs and he was led into a back bedroom by the gunman. Meanwhile, the gunman's companion taped Root's girlfriend's mouth shut and kept her secured in the front of the house, investigators said.

The girlfriend told police she heard the sound of a single gunshot come from the rear bedroom and the intruders quickly left.

When police arrived, they found Root had died from a gunshot wound to the neck. Investigators have speculated Root was possibly killed while trying to defend himself.

Since then investigators have been stymied in their efforts to identify and capture the
