Ernest E. Eakin

Services for Ernest E. Eakin, 96, of Irving will be at 11 a.m. Friday at South MacArthur Church of Christ, with the Rev. Kregg Hood officiating. Burial will be at Holly Hills Memorial Park in Granbury, under the direction of Donnelly’s Colonial Funeral Home.

Mr. Eakin died Tuesday at The Irving Hospital.

He is survived by his daughters, Hazel Colvin of Irving, Pauline Röthwell of Olympia, Wash., and Pawnee Etheredge of Allen; sister, Vera Forbes of Rising Star; five grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Mall: Employees try to get back to normal

"It just sort of drew everyone down here," she said.

On Tuesday, it was "business as usual," Slone said.

Police Capt. T.J. Hall met with mall employees Tuesday morning to answer questions they had concerning the shootings. Parson said mall management wants to communicate with the employees and calm their fears.

"Granted, it was a tragedy," Parson said. "We regret that it happened at all, but it was a personal matter that could have happened any number of locations."

After the shootings, however, some employees expressed concern about gangs hanging out at the mall.

"There have been a lot of gangs around here. ... They really need to cut back on the loitering around here," said Scottie Johnson, a Foley's employee.

Johnson said she fears walking to her car alone at night.

Parson, however, said gang violence has not been a major problem at the mall.

"We do have a high percentage of teen traffic at certain times, as most shopping places do," she said.

"The majority of that teen traffic is well-behaved."

There have been incidents, however: Police recently arrested two teen-agers after an attack on another teen at the mall, Hall said.

Tammie Guthrie, an employee of Texas T Ice Cream, said the shooting will make her think twice about working at the mall.

"It's got me all shaken up. I don't even want to wait on anybody. I just want to walk out of here," she said a few minutes after Taylor's murder.

Hall said the mall is no more dangerous than any other part of the city.

In addition to outside and inside security by mall forces, city police patrol the area. In fact, Irving officers in that sector of the city have one of the smallest areas to patrol, Hall said.

People can dial 911 from all pay telephones at the mall without depositing money, Hall said. The Police Department also increases its patrol during peak shopping times and works special assignments at the mall.

"If they start having a bunch of purse-snatchings, we're going to be working it. We're going to be on those people," Hall said.

friend, Demetria Yvonne Taylor of Arlington, argued in the mall's south parking lot, which is at the edge of the West Freeway service road.

Edwards, an Irving resident and employee of Paragon Cable, apparently earlier had called Taylor and told her he wanted to get some of her property out of his apartment, Hall said.

As Edwards blocked Taylor's car — parked in the employee area of the parking lot because Taylor was a part-time worker — with his car and the two argued, Hall said.

"What happened out here in the parking lot, we just don't know," Hall said.

Taylor ran through the parking lot, grabbed a man and asked him to help her, Hall said. The man broke away and ran in the opposite direction, Hall said, while Taylor wove her way through parked cars toward the mall as Edwards chased her with a .38-caliber pistol.

Edwards fired two shots, both of which missed and lodged in the outer wall of the mall. Taylor had been running toward the Dillard's entrance but, when Edwards fired the second shot, she turned toward the Food Court entrance, Hall said.

Some witnesses told police that Edwards grabbed Taylor in a headlock before shooting her, twice in the head, but Hall said police still do not know at what angle the shots were fired from.

Edwards never fired toward other mall patrons, Hall said.

"He had a single-minded purpose, and that was to shoot her," he said.

After he shot Taylor, Edwards ran back across the parking lot to the spot where the two cars were parked.

After Edwards jumped into his car — in which police later recovered a .38-caliber handgun — the gunman shot him from about 25 yards away, police said.

Taylor died at the scene, and Edwards died at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Both cars were registered to Taylor. The windshield of the car she was driving also was pierced by a bullet, but police do not know at what point that shot was fired.

Hall said police are re-creating the two crime scenes and piecing together the case.

"We've still got lots of witnesses to talk to," he said. "Everybody saw little parts of it. We're still sorting this out."

Although the details surrounding Edwards' shooting are sketchy, police do know that Edwards killed Taylor, Hall said.

"He definitely killed her. He died of a gunshot wound out here on the road," he said.

Employees working inside the Food Court entrance near where Taylor was shot said they heard the shots, but were not sure what had happened until they saw Taylor's body on the ground.

"I was working on a game," said Desmond Everett of TILT, a video arcade. "I heard a real loud pop. I thought someone was beating on one of our games."

Anyone with information about the unknown gunman should contact police, Hall said.

"What we would like for him to do is come in and talk to us about the incident," he said.

Witnesses with any other information also should call IPD, Hall said.
Mall shooting case to come before jury

A Dallas County grand jury Monday will hear the case of Irving resident Todd Alan Broom, according to the assistant district attorney who supervises grand juries.

Irving police have filed murder charges against Broom, 25, who told police that he fired the shot that killed 41-year-old Eddie Edwards at Irving Mall on March 12.

District attorney Hugh Lucas said the grand jury could wrap up its deliberations later Monday and, if so, would hand down a decision by March 28.
Broom: Irving Mall shooter no-billed

Broom could be indicted because he did not use deadly force within the means of the law to defend himself, another person or property. But Jackson said Monday that his client was attempting to make a "citizen's arrest" on Edwards when he fired his Ruger Super Hawk .44-caliber Magnum revolver twice into Edwards' car.

Broom ended a two-day search for the mystery gunman at the mall when he walked into Irving police headquarters March 14 and told officers that he was the man they were seeking for the shooting of Edwards. Police already had visited Broom's workplace, arriving while he was away, reports said.

stances, even though he was not legally justified.

As an assistant district attorney, I can appreciate the fact that it was not justified under the law.

As a human being, I can understand what the grand jury did," Kinne said.

Broom's attorney, Frank Jackson, was scheduled to announce his reaction to the decision at a news conference in his Dallas office at 11 a.m. today. Neither Jackson nor Broom was present for this morning's announcement by the grand jury.

Broom has been the subject of national scrutiny since the afternoon of March 12, when he fired the shot that killed 41-year-old Eddie Edwards of Irving. Broom told police that he had just watched Edwards shoot Edwards' former girlfriend twice in the head outside the mall's Food Court entrance.

Demetria Yvonne Taylor, 28, died at the scene, Irving police said. Edwards, who was hit in the abdomen by a bullet that passed through his car door as he was fleeing the parking lot, died about an hour later at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Edwards managed to drive to the Airport Freeway service road before crashing his car into a wooden post.

Broom — whose action has prompted debates over whether he is a hero or a vigilante — testified for more than 30 minutes before the grand jury Monday. When he left the room, his lower lip was quivering and he admitted to being "upset" and "scared." He was accompanied by his fiancée, Carol Lowe; his parents, Jane and Larry; Broom of Irving; and two attorneys, Jackson and Richard Scherba.

Assistant district attorney Norm Kinne has said that he believed Irving resident Todd Broom (center) leaves the Grand Jury room Monday with his attorney, Frank Jackson, and his fiancee, Carol Lowe.

High-profile case hikes murder rate

Four killings, several sexual assaults mar otherwise dipping March figures

By DEENA GRAVES News Staff Writer

Two highly publicized shootings at Irving Mall and a man suspected of sexually assaulting at least three older women contributed to a March hike in two crimes-against-persons categories in the city.

The overall crime rate, however, dropped 7 percent for the month, as every other category showed declines compared with March 1989 figures, according to statistics released recently by the Irving Police Department.

There were four cases classified by police as murder in March, two of which occurred at the mall. On March 12, resident Eddie Edwards shot and killed his 28-year-old former girlfriend; Todd Broom, who had gone to the mall to buy bullets and work boots, witnessed the murder and shot and killed Edwards.

A grand jury declined to indict Broom for Edwards’ shooting.

The lone unsolved murder in March has left police searching for the killer of an Irving motel manager.
Crime: Rate down

Jerry Lee Kimmey, manager of Allstar Inn, was gunned down March 4 by a man in a gray, late 1970s Oldsmobile Cutlass or Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

A motel tenant watched the gunman shoot Kimmey once in the stomach after a brief exchange in the motel parking lot, 510 S. Loop 12. Kimmey had walked up to the car when the gunman, another man and possibly another passenger pulled in.

Police do not have a suspect in the shooting death. Capt. T.J. Hall said, but they are continuing their investigation.

"A lot of the robbery, burglary, theft and vehicle thefts are directly tied to drugs, and we have made (prosecuted) a lot of drug cases. We’ve had a lot of success in our drug enforcement."

"We haven't exhausted all our leads on it," Hall said.

In an unrelated incident, a 36-year-old man was shot and killed March 4. Police charged a 30-year-old man who had previously lived with the victim's family with the murder.

The two apparently had been arguing about how many people should live in the victim's new apartment in the 1900 block of Shoaf Drive, police said.

The four murders in March were the first four of the year. Two murders had been committed through March 1989, although none were committed in the month itself.

Sexual assaults climbed from three in March 1989 to six in March 1990. Fourteen sexual assaults were reported through March 1989, compared with 20 this year.

While most sexual assault victims are attacked by someone they know, police are looking for a man they believe is responsible for sexually assaulting three older women in the past two months.

The suspect has been described as a white male, about 30, about 6 feet, with a medium build and dark, greasy hair.

The suspect attacked the women early in the morning, in their homes.

In other attacks on people, aggravated assaults, which involve a weapon, dropped from 36 in March 1989 to 23 in March 1990. They fell from 92 through March 1989 to 51 in 1990.

Although auto thefts declined in March, they followed their pattern, clustering in the business districts near the mall and in South Irving.

"Basically, your auto thefts are confined along your major arteries," Hall said.

Thieves stole 107 vehicles in March 1990, compared with 132 in March 1989. About 80 percent of the cars were reported taken from apartment complexes, businesses and automobile dealerships near Airport Freeway or Irving Boulevard.

"You're losing very few (vehicles) out of the single-family residences," Hall said.

Police "beat," or patrol area, 23, west of Belt Line Road and south of Airport Freeway, saw the largest number of vehicle thefts, with 11 disappearing.

One beat, No. 47 in far North Irving, near North Lake, reported no cars stolen in March.

Vehicle thefts in March dropped, in part because police have closed the doors on several "chop shops," where stolen cars are dismantled and sold or traded.

"There have been several of them in the Metroplex closed down," Hall said.

Vehicle thefts for the year dropped from 409 in 1989 to 328 in 1990.

Thefts, excluding vehicle thefts, dipped from 727 in March 1989 to 725 in March 1990. Through March, thefts dropped from 2,124 in 1989 to 2,003 in 1990.

"A lot of the robbery, burglary, theft and vehicle thefts are directly tied to drugs, and we have made (prosecuted) a lot of drug cases," Hall said. "We've had a lot of success in our drug enforcement."

$200,000 loss estimated in pre-dawn blaze on Pioneer

By LAURIE BARNETT
News Staff Writer

A 49-year-old man was killed and four other people, including two firefighters, were injured when fire swept through 16 units of the Texan Apartments complex early this morning.

The three-alarm fire was reported at 5:32 a.m. and was under control about an hour later, said Fire Marshal Ken Lewallen. Damage was estimated at about $200,000, and the cause of the fire was being investigated.

The fire victim, whose identity had not been released, was occupying the ground-floor unit where the fire started, Lewallen said. It was the first fatality of the year in Irving.
Fire: One killed in morning blaze

"We ran and beat on all the windows to get them up."

— Terri Kirk, apartment tenant

The fire spread to nearby units on both floors of the northeast side of the two-story building at 1023 E. Pioneer Drive.

Ten units were damaged by flames, and the remaining suffered water and smoke damage, Lewallen said.

The firefighters were injured when the second-floor walkway on which one firefighter was working gave way, and the firefighter fell to the ground, landing on the second firefighter, Lewallen said.

The two men were being treated at The Irving Hospital emergency room this morning, and no condition report was immediately available. A hospital spokeswoman identified the firefighters as Kenneth Savage and Robert McGilvray.

Two residents, a 30-year-old woman and a 40-year-old man, were taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital, Lewallen said.

Terri Kirk, who lived in the apartment immediately above where the blaze started, said she awoke at 5:30 a.m., smelled smoke and ran into the living room where her son was sleeping.

She then opened the front door of the unit, saw the smoke and went to get her son. Within minutes, when they opened the door again, "flames were everywhere," she said, and they had to climb out a window to get onto the walkway for the units.

Kirk said she went to nearby apartments to warn the neighbors.

"We ran and beat on all the windows to get them up," she said.

Ann Morris, manager of the 25-year-old complex, said the contents of the apartments were extensively damaged.

"A lot of clothes and furniture were burned," she said.

Most of the units were occupied, said Morris, who added that Red Cross workers had arrived at the scene to help residents find shelter.

The Red Cross was opening a family assistance service center at 10 a.m. to help the residents with relocation, said Rob Hull, a Red Cross duty officer who was at the scene.

The fire displaced residents of 32 units at the complex, Hull said, adding that more specific information about the number of residents needing help would be available as the service center interviewed the residents.

Also, the management of the apartment complex was working to relocate residents into two vacant units at the complex and was working with another complex to place some residents there.
Fatal apartment fire boosts March loss
Man killed, 4 hurt in $236,000 blaze

By DEENA GRAVES
News Staff Writer

An unattended cooking fire that killed a 49-year-old man and injured two other apartment complex residents and two firefighters added $236,000 worth of fuel to March’s losses, according to statistics released last week by the Irving Fire Department.

The March 21 inferno at the Texan Apartments, 1023 E. Pioneer Drive, was the highest dollar loss for the month, driving the total to $466,375, the lowest thus far this year.

January’s losses totaled $725,000, and February’s losses were $577,050.

The fire victim, Kent Edwards, was found in the ground-floor unit where the fire started. His death was the first fire fatality of the year.

The two injured residents were hurt when they jumped from their second-story units. A 40-year-old man broke his leg, and a 30-year-old woman suffered cuts and bruises to her chin and face. They both were treated at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

The two firefighters were treated at The Irving Hospital after the second-floor walkway on which one of them was working gave way, plunging him atop the second firefighter who was working on the ground.

The 32-unit wing of the complex damaged in the fire has not reopened.

Also classified as a fire loss in March was a one-car accident that killed a 33-year-old man. He was eastbound in the 200 block of Interstate Highway 635, near the Valley View Lane turnaround, when his 1988 Buick left the road, traveled 500 feet on the median, careened off an embankment and landed on a service road below, police reports said. The car then skidded into a concrete bridge abutment and exploded into flames, reports said.

A 10-month-old child was injured in March when an incense burner ignited a $12,000 blaze at a home in the 1400 block of West Shady Grove Road. The infant suffered smoke inhalation and first-degree burns to her face and back during the March 6 fire.

Unattended cooking fires and children playing with matches were the leading sources of fires in March, with each being blamed for five blazes.

"We've been having a lot of children with matches problems," Fire Marshal Ken Lewallen said. "Parents need to be cognizant of their children. A child somewhere in his lifetime is going to become curious about fires."

To douse that curiosity, parents should teach their children about fire in a controlled environment, Lewallen said.

"There, of course, should be some unpleasant work in it, so it no longer is fun," Lewallen said.

The fire damage resulting from the children playing with matches was $870. Unattended cooking fires spread $240,600 worth of damage.

"Cooking fires are still the No. 1 cause in the nation," Lewallen said.

The only insurance against a cooking fire is to remove all pans from the stove when no one is in the kitchen, he said.

In other incidents, a blaze classified as suspicious caused $100,000 worth of damage to an apartment complex on the 400 block of South MacArthur Boulevard on March 2, and a cigarette sparked a fire that resulted in $70,000 worth of damage to a storage complex in the 500 block of North O'Connor Road on March 15.

Also in March, four electrical shorts resulted in $860 worth of damage.
