Infant dies suddenly

Doctors say Presbyterian machines gave Irving baby two extra weeks

By DEENA GRAVES
News Staff Writer

Will Sherman said that, without the Presbyterian program, his son never would have survived for two weeks. He is thankful, he said, for that two weeks.

"If I had to do it all over again, I'd do it all the same. My wife (Angela) said it gave us two weeks we didn't have. He just had more than could be dealt with," Sherman said.

William had been off the group of machines since Jan. 17 and had steadily improved. The hospital team, as well as his family, was shocked when he suddenly worsened and died within minutes, said Jeff Lyon, coordinator of Presbyterian's "Extra Corporeal Membrane Oxygenation" program.

"It's hard for the team, too," Lyon said. "Things were looking really good. It's a real roller coaster for us."

"We honestly don't know at this point why he died."

The program at Presbyterian — one of only four in Texas — gives undeveloped infants new hope for life. A group of machines — "basically an artificial heart and artificial lung" for infants, Lyon said — is used as a life-support system, to

Baby: Child dies despite treatment

Lyon said, a good percentage for babies who supposedly have no chance when they are born.

"Their chance of survival is slim to none," Lyon said. "We certainly don't make any guarantees, but they have no other hope. I feel very strongly about it."

"It's cut-and-dried; without it, these babies are going to die."

William was an exception to the typical baby put on the machine, Lyon said. Most of the babies made it through normal pregnancies before something went wrong at birth, he said.

"As a general rule, these kids are normal. The kids are born, and, all of a sudden, they're dying," Lyon said.

A Plano baby on the machine now is just such a baby.

The baby was born Jan. 16, past due. His mother had a normal pregnancy, but suddenly everything was wrong.

Henrietta Gallardo, the child's grandmother, said that if he had not been born at Presbyterian, he would not have lived long enough to transfer to the machine.

The machine has kept the baby's blood oxidized while doctors performed three surgeries, she said. He was born with his heart pushed out of place, his intestines behind one of his lungs and his other lung not fully developed, she said.

Doctors began weaning the child from the machine Monday and hope to have him completely off it by the end of the week.

The news of the Sherman child shook the Plano family, but it did not shake their faith in the procedure, Gallardo said.

"If it hadn't been for the machine, he wouldn't have been given a chance. Regardless of the outcome, he was given a chance," she said.

Sherman said he is thankful his baby was given a chance, too, and he knows everything possible was done.

"They did a super job," he said. "As a matter of fact, the next kid we have will be born at Presbyterian."

Story son dies after long illness

John Henry Story, 69, a lifelong Irving resident and member of one of Irving's first families, died Sunday at The Irving Hospital after a long illness.

Services were Tuesday at Ben F. Brown Funeral Home, with the Rev. Terry White and the Rev. David Story officiating.

Story's family settled in Old Kit, located in the area of today's Irving Heights and Sixth Street, in the 1800s, before Irving was founded. His grandfather, Ike Story, ran Irving's first post office.

John Story was born in Old Kit and went to school in Irving when the city had only one school.

He was buried in Old Kit Cemetery, where his ancestors are buried.

He was a commercial fisherman, making his living from area lakes and rivers.

He is survived by his sons, Johnny Frank Story of Fairfield and Charles Story of Irving; daughter, Rita Shaffer of California; brothers, O.L. Story of Frankston and George Story of Irving; and sister, Lillie Brindley of Irving.

Farine Elementary School named after resident’s father

Longtime Irving resident Esther Story, daughter of Albert Farine, one of Irving’s first citizens, died Sunday in Granbury at the age of 90.

Services were Tuesday at Chism-Smith Funeral Home. Burial was at Oak Grove Memorial Gardens, with the Rev. Norman Beavers officiating.

Mrs. Story was born July 11, 1899, in Irving to Albert and Rosetta Farine. North Irving’s Farine Elementary School was named after Albert Farine, the son of early Irving settlers Nicholas and Jane Mills Farine.

According to Joe Rice’s Irving: A Texas Odyssey, Nicholas Farine, Mrs. Story’s grandfather, owned the 10-acre site on which then-Irving Community Hospital was built. The land, however, left the possession of the Farine estate in 1949 and later was donated for the hospital by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Williams, the book says.

Mrs. Story’s husband, Lewis Henry Story, owned Story Service Station on the corner of Britain Road and Main Street (now Irving Boulevard) for many years, before running a battery service company in Irving and Grand Prairie. He died of cancer in the late 1970s at the Irving Hospital.

Lewis Story’s father, Earl Story, founded the first taxicab company in Irving, according to Albert Earl Story, 68, son of Lewis and Esther Story. Irving’s Story Road was named after Earl Story’s brother, Albert Earl Story said.

Mrs. Story is survived by her four children — Albert Earl Story of Granbury, Naomi Spence and Mary Webb of Granbury and Dorothy Hawkins of Marshall, Mo.; 12 grandchildren; 31 great-grandchildren; nine great-great-grandchildren; and three sisters, Ruby Wilson of Carrollton, Bertha Wilson of Cedar Hill and Gertrude Morgan of Arkansas.

Mrs. Story, a housewife, lived in Irving until 1984, when she moved to Granbury to be closer to her family. She died at Hood County General Hospital.

She and her family were members of the Church of Christ in Irving.
