Involuntary manslaughter trial ends in hung jury

By REGINA STEFFEN
News Staff Writer

The trial of Joseph Keith Lowery Jr. on three counts of involuntary manslaughter ended in a hung jury Monday. A new trial date has been set for Dec. 16.

Three days of testimony was wrapped up Friday with jurors sent home for the weekend. Deliberations began Monday.

Lowery was charged with the three counts of involuntary manslaughter following a May 16, 1992 auto accident that left three people dead.

Police say that Lowery was northbound on Belt Line Road in a Camaro when the accident occurred. They allege that the Camaro was traveling at least 80 mph.

The portion of Belt Line where the accident occurred has a median and left-turn lanes with a posted speed limit of 35 mph.

The right side of a Ford Aerostar mini-van driven by 39-year-old Walt McIver was impacted by the Camaro as McIver, who was headed south on Belt Line, attempted a left turn onto Shady Grove Road.

When the autos collided, the side sliding door of the mini-van flew off its hinges. Three of the four people sitting on the bench seat were thrown from the van, and all three — Alfred Huckabee, 67; Irving's Dorothy Sue Lane, 49; and Tommy Sullivan, 42 — were killed.

The back hatch door of the mini-van also flew off, police said.

The Camaro continued forward on Belt Line and then spun out 180 degrees, police investigator Robert Holsworth said.

All five of the city's ambulances were dispatched to the scene of the accident, as well as a private ambulance and CareFlite.

On Monday, following several hours of deliberations in the case, it was clear that the jurors were not going to reach a consensus. Seven of the jurors wanted to find Lowery guilty of involuntary manslaughter, a felony. The other five jurors wanted to find him guilty of criminally negligent homicide, which is a misdemeanor.

Howard Blackmon, the assistant district attorney who tried the case, declined comment until it was tried for a second time.

He said a tentative date of Dec. 13 had been set for retrial, but added that it may not be heard until mid-January.

Police said that, throughout their investigation, they had no indication that McIver saw the Camaro until impact.

The family in the mini-van was on the way home from a dinner celebrating the May 16 graduation from South Methodist University of Lane's daughter. Lane Sullivan and Alfred Huckabee attended the dinner and the graduation ceremony.
