Search for missing Laredo resident ends

By Elizabeth Cardenas

MEXICAN OFFICIALS CONCLUDE COUPLE

must have been in fatal accident

The search for Laredo resident

Jimenez, 46, who went missing last weekend, ended in a tragic accident, Mexican officials said.

"We're done," the search concluded, "Jimenez is no longer with us."

The search for Jimenez was called off after a 48-hour search of the area where Jimenez was last seen. The search was conducted on Thursday afternoon, involving multiple agencies and residents.

"It was a very difficult search," a local official said. "We knew he was in the area, but there were so many obstacles."

Police seek husband in motel room slaying

By REGINA STEFFEN
News Staff Writer

The hunt is still on for the man police believe killed Dallas resident Brigitte Jones Friday at a local hotel.

Police have an outstanding warrant for Jones' estranged husband, Stevie Jones, 35, of Dallas. Brigitte Jones' body was found Friday in a Budget Inn hotel room, 1205 S. Loop 12. Her 11-month-old baby girl also was found in the room unharmed.

Police said the victim, 24, had been staying with family members in Houston after filing for a divorce from her husband. She returned to Irving last week with her baby girl to retrieve some personal items, family members told police.

Witnesses say the hotel room in which she was found was rented about midnight Thursday by a man fitting her husband's description. Police are uncertain why Jones was with her husband in the motel room, where signs of a struggle were evident.

Police said Brigitte Jones' body had several contusions, including around her neck. They are uncertain whether her death was directly due to strangulation or to blows.

Meanwhile, relatives of the dead woman have asked for custody of the infant who was taken into protective custody by Child Protective Services.

Stevie Jones was driving a 1976 burgundy over gray Oldsmobile Cutlass with T-tops, police said, with the license number JLV-82F. He was described as a light-skinned black man, 6 feet 1 inch, and weighing between 195 and 200 pounds. He may have a mustache.

Irving police are asking that anyone with information on his whereabouts call 721-2535.

Jones' death was the third homicide in Irving this year. The first homicide, the stabbing death of Larry Lynn Leggett, remains unsolved and is still being investigated.

The second homicide, the shooting death of 69-year-old Charles Andrew Dickey Jr. on Feb. 2, led to the arrest of a 19-year-old woman, Bridgette Price, and a 16-year-old male from Dallas.

Irving detectives flew to California Monday to arrest the prime suspect in the Feb. 15 strangulation and beating death of Brigitte Lollar Jones at an Irving motel.

Police were contacted Sunday by authorities in La Mesa, Calif., after 31-year-old Steve Jones, the victim's husband, turned himself over to police there. Mr. Jones waived his extradition rights.

Detectives suspected Mr. Jones had fled the Dallas area because his car was found abandoned at D/FW Airport on Feb. 23.

IPD Capt. Travis Hall said Mr. Jones apparently flew to Las Vegas and then to California.

"We don't know why he turned himself in," IPD Sgt. Richard Dix said. "We are sending investigators out there to talk to him and bring him back to Texas. Hopefully, by

Police seek information in man's stabbing death

Police are looking for anyone who may have information about the murder of a south Irving man who was found stabbed to death Tuesday morning in his Bluebonnet Drive home.

Larry Leggett, 43, was found by relatives, who had become concerned after he failed to show up for work at McDonald's on Irving Boulevard.

According to Leggett's relatives, the house was locked when they arrived and they had to break into Leggett's home.

Police investigators are checking reports that an unidentified man called the McDonald's restaurant Sunday morning to say he found Leggett's wallet but would not leave his name.

By Tuesday, Leggett's family had become concerned about his whereabouts and filed a missing persons report with the Irving police. After the report was filed, Leggett's mother and sister then broke into Leggett's home on Bluebonnet, police said.

Police would not say if a murder weapon was discovered at the scene, saying only that Leggett died of multiple stab wounds.

Investigators said they are following all leads in the case but would release few details. They do know that Leggett reported to work at McDonald's on Saturday and that a neighbor said she saw him on Sunday.

The incident marks the first homicide in Irving this year.
UD luminary dies; leaves long legacy

By JULIE CARRICK DALTON
News Staff Writer

Rev. Louis J. Lekai, long credited with resurrecting the once-defunct University of Dallas, died Friday of lung failure at St. Paul Medical Center.

Among the other successes in his life, the 78-year-old Rev. Lekai had helped restore the University of Dallas after its closure years ago, helping transform it into the prosperous institution it is today.

The Roman Catholic priest of the Cistercian Order came to the United States in 1947 after fleeing communist Hungary. Once here, he not only learned English, but published scholarly essays and books in the language.

After earning his doctorate in history, with a minor in philosophy, at the Royal University of Budapest, he taught at the Catholic Law School of Eger, Hungary. Under pressure of the communist government, Lekai left Hungary to continue his career in America.

"Leaving Hungary was a personal decision," Lekai said several years ago. "There was no question that the situation in Hungary after the war left the order without a future there, so we had to save at least the men."

He helped establish the Abbey of Our Lady of Spring Bank near Milwaukee. He enrolled in Marquette University to study the American education system and went on to become an assistant professor at Canius College in Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1956 Lekai, along with members of the established monastic, helped re-open the doors of the University of Dallas after it had temporarily shut down.

He introduced several new courses to both schools and always involved himself with his students, especially favoring the university chess club and the history club.

Lekai published countless works about the Cistercian Order and was the only authority on its modern phases.

He taught at the University of Dallas until 1981 when he suffered a stroke which left him partially paralyzed and mute. Despite being bedridden, he maintained his strong ties to the university.

A funeral mass is scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday at the Cistercian Abbey. Dallas Bishop Charles V. Grahmann, retired Bishop Thomas Tschoepe and brother priests of the Cistercian Order will officiate.

Burial will be in the Calvary Hill Cemetery. Lekai is survived by his two brothers, Lazlo Lekai, Florence, Italy, and Emery Lekai, England.

Renowned UD educator dies

Sister Mary Clodovia Lockett, a former teacher at the University of Dallas in Irving, died Monday at the age of 81.

“Sister Clo,” as she was known by many students and faculty members, had taught science and biology at the university since 1965. She guided more than 500 students through the school’s pre-med program. In honor of her 50-year contribution to science research and teaching, the university created the Sister Mary Clodovia Lockett Scholarship Fund in 1993.

“Sister Clodovia was an outstanding teacher and professor and we believe that the excellent reputation of the university’s biology, pre-med and allied health programs is due in large part to her dedicated leadership,” said university president Robert Sasseen. “We are all deeply saddened by this great loss.”

Sister Clodovia was born in 1913 in Austin and was raised in Irish Ridge, east of Dallas. She received degrees from St. Louis University in Missouri and De Paul University in Indiana. She was given the Piper Professor award in 1969 and was recognized as Outstanding Educator of America by the Society of Sigma XI and Kappa Delta PI in 1970, 1972, 1974, 1975 and 1977.

She served as chair of the Council of Religious Women, board member of the Catholic Interracial Council and the American Cancer Society, and also worked with the In-Services Institutes for Irving Teachers.

Sister Clodovia died at St. Mary of the Pines Home in Chatawa, Miss. A vigil service was scheduled for Thursday at 11 a.m., and the funeral was set to follow at 1:30 p.m. A memorial mass at the university’s Chapel of the Incarnation will be scheduled in August when the school year begins.

The university requests that memorials be made to the scholarship fund.
