Longtime city secretary dies; friends shocked

Lester Grant Ford, a longtime former city secretary for the city of Irving, died Thursday at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. He was 51.

His unexpected death came as a shock to many who knew him, said friend Bob Nelson.

"It was a great surprise to everyone in the community," he said. "Les was full of life. He really enjoyed working with people."

Friends and co-workers remembered Ford as a man who often went out of his way to help others.

"Anyone he knew is going to miss him dearly. He was a really fine man, and this is just hard to take," said deputy city secretary Jan Hart, who worked under Ford during his 14-year reign as city secretary.

City leaders took a few moments at a public meeting Thursday night to remember Ford.

City Manager Steve McCullough and Mayor Bobby Joe Raper praised Ford for his service to the city, and consoled those who knew him.

"We're all deeply moved, those of us who knew Les for a long time. Les had a good heart, a good heart. And we're going to miss him," Mayor Raper said. "Everytime this happens it reminds us that life is fragile, and it's fleeting."

Ford began his post as Irving city secretary in 1980 and remained there until his retirement in May 1994.

Previously, he had worked for the city of Dallas from 1966 to 1980. He was appointed assistant city secretary in 1977 and remained at that position until his move to Irving in 1980.

Ford received a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1967 from North Texas State University. He was a graduate of South Oak Cliff High School.

He was born in Sulphur Springs, Texas, on May 16, 1943, and grew up in Dallas.

Ford is survived by his wife, Debra Ford of Irving; children, Amy Christine, Amy Elaine and Christopher Perkins, all of Dallas; mother, Jackie Ford Cox of Dallas; brother, Lamar B. Ford of Waxahachie; and three nephews.

Private services were held Saturday.
