Pool hall killer sentenced

☑ Farmers Branch

man gets life in prison

By LIZABETH CARDENAS

News Staff Writer

A Farmers Branch man was sentenced to life in prison Wednesday for the November fatal shooting of a Dallas man at an Irving pool hall.

Victor Manuel Cruz, 19, had been found guilty of the murder of 19-year-old Ismael Olvera at Nhung Billiards and Games, 1716 E. Irving Blvd. Cruz must serve 30 years before becoming eligible for parole.

Leonel Obdulio Castro, 20, of Farmers Branch, is awaiting trial for the murder of Olvera. His trial has been set for Dec. 11 in the 194th District Court. Castro's bond was originally set at $50,000 but was later reduced to $25,000. He posted bond on Dec. 16, 1994.

Police said both Cruz and Castro shot Olvera after a fight erupted at the pool hall at approximately 2 a.m. between Olvera and a group of 10 to 15 Hispanic men, including Cruz and Castro. Olvera was beaten and shot several times, and his brother-in-law and a friend were also beaten.

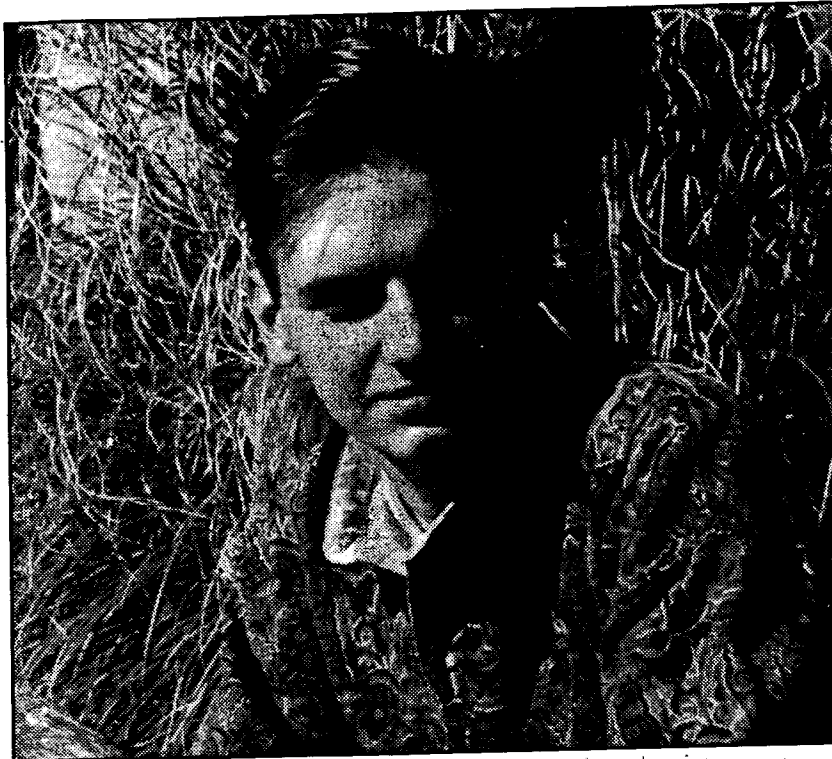

"Supposedly, Castro pulled out a gun and shot him (Olvera) once, and then he gave the gun to Cruz," Assistant Police Chief Travis Hall told the Irving News. "The victim then started begging for his life, and then Castro shot him in the head several times."

The fight broke out after a 14-year-old bumped into Olvera.

The group, which came into the pool hall together, started teaming up on Olvera, his brother-in-law and a friend, police said.

Hall said the suspects were even hitting the victims with pool cues.
