Irving man killed in Dallas party shooting

By LIZABETH CARDENAS
News Staff Writer

Dallas police are looking for the suspect who allegedly shot to death a 20-year-old Irving man at a party in the Ledbetter neighborhood of Dallas over the weekend.

Dallas police believe Jaime Loredo, 20, shot and killed Ernesto Hernandez at about 2:15 a.m. Sunday at a residence located at 3204 Clymer Street, police said.

"Police got a shooting call and, when they arrived at the scene, they found Hernandez in the backyard with two gunshot wounds to his lower chest," said Detective Chris Gilliam with the Dallas Police Department.

Hernandez was taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital, where he died approximately an hour later.

According to Gilliam, Loredo shot Hernandez after a fight broke out at the party attended by both men that was held in a residential backyard. Police said friends and family made up the people at the party.

"They were at a party, and the suspect and the victim were friends," Gilliam said. "They were talking and drinking in the backyard, and then they got into a fight.

That's when Hernandez was shot."

Dallas police are trying to determine a motive in the shooting, Gilliam said.

"None of the witnesses knew why he (Loredo) shot him (Hernandez)," Gilliam said. "And, at this time, police do not know why he did either."

Police have not received any specific details from witnesses about the actual shooting, police said.

"Witnesses said they heard three or four gunshots and then saw the suspect run from the backyard," Gilliam said. "He got into a 1993 white Ford pickup truck and fled the scene."

Dallas police found Loredo's truck at a nearby apartment complex and had it towed to the city pound, Gilliam said. However, police still have not found Loredo nor the weapon, Gilliam said.

"We don't know exactly what type of gun it was — at this point, it's just an unknown handgun," Gilliam said.

Loredo is described as a 20-year-old Latin man approximately 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 130 pounds.

Anyone with information the case can call 670-4426.
