Terry Hinley – Teacher From his brother’s CD

On Thursday, March 6, 1997, Glasnots co-founder Terry Hinely was passing through a green light in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas when an uninsured driver without a license ran a red light and struck his vehicle. Terry never regained consciousness and died two days later at Parkland Hospital. This would have been Terry's 10th year of spreading joy at Renaissance festivals throughout Texas and Oklahoma. Many knew him as the cheerful... glass harmonica player who, along with his brother Donal on guitar and vocals, performed as Glasnots. Over the years, thousands have watched in amazement and wonder as Terry’s fingers evoked magical and haunting music from an odd, makeshift assortment of brandy snifters and wine glasses which he had carefully selected from local thrift stores. But music was only one facet of an influential life. Terry was also a gifted teacher of German and English. He taught in the Irving School District for almost 20 years. Many current and former students have called and written expressing sorrow and also their gratitude for having known him as a teacher and a friend. He was a loving husband, companion, and friend to Heather Williams and an irreplaceable father to his daughter Kelsi. Anyone who observed them knew that he and Kelsi shared a relationship that few fathers and daughters ever reach....

Mr Hinley reached my life in a way few have been able to. He's greatly missed.

IN MEMORY OF TERRY HINELY

On Thursday March 6, 1997 Glasnotts co-founder Terry Hinely was passing through a green light in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas, Texas when an uninsured driver without a license ran a red light and struck his vehicle. Terry never regained consciousness and died two days later at Parkland Hospital in Dallas. His 9 year old daughter Kelsi and one of her classmates were also in the car and are recovering from injuries sustained in the accident.

This would have been Terry's 10th year of spreading joy at Renaissance Faires throughout Texas and Oklahoma. Many knew him as the cheerful glass harmonica player who, along with his brother Donal on guitar and vocals, performed as Glasnotts. Over the years, thousands have watched in amazement and wonder as Terry's fingers evoked magical and haunting music from an odd, makeshift assortment of brandy snifters and wine glasses which he had carefully selected from local thrift stores.

But music was only one facet of an influential life. Terry was also a truly gifted teacher of German and English. He taught in the Irving [TX] school district for almost 20 years. Many current and former students have called and written expressing sorrow and also their gratitude for having known him as a teacher and friend.

He was a loving husband, companion and friend to Heather Williams and an irreplaceable father to his daughter Kelsi. Anyone who observed them knew that he and Kelsi shared a special relationship that few fathers and daughters ever reach.

Terry Hinely left a rich legacy to those he touched with his music, through his teaching, as a father, as a brother, and as a friend. It is out of concern for this legacy that friends and family have established the Kelsi Hinely Trust to benefit his daughter. Due to an overwhelming response and demand, a tribute CD featuring the music of Terry Hinely and Glasnotts has been produced. Proceeds from the sale of this CD tribute and from other previously released Glasnotts CD's will go to this trust targeted for Kelsi's college education.

On March 6, 1998, an uninsured and unlicensed motorist ran a red light and struck the vehicle carrying Glasnorts co-founder Terry Hinely, killing him. This tragedy robbed the world of one of the few musicians capable of playing the glass harmonica. For nine years, Hinely had entertained attendees at Renaissance festivals in Texas and Oklahoma by drawing ethereal notes from crystal glasses filled with varying amounts of water, and to listen to his music is to understand why Mozart wrote music specifically for this instrument.

Glasnorts produced five albums before Hinely's untimely death, and Re-Elect The Moon contains more than 71 minutes of highlights from those efforts, and there's some truly amazing stuff here. Of the 24 tracks here, 16 are original and eight are traditional pieces, and all manage to convey a unique sound. Perhaps most striking are the most familiar of the traditional selections, such as "Lord of the Dance," "Amazing Grace," and "Scarborough Faire." Familiar yes, but when the pure notes of glass touch these, they take on a decidedly fes quality. The selections, with their distinct melodies and deliberate pacing lend themselves perfectly to this instrumentation. The same holds true for "Don't Walk On The Glass," a Hinely original from 1991 that is saucy and frivolous and everything else that conveys a giddy excitement. "Ode To Twinkle" is a clever, audacious medley that transposes Beethoven's "Ode To Joy" with the children's nursery rhyme "Twinkle Twinkle, Little Star," two bits of music that have more in common than you'd think. "Tis great fun.

Another traditional reworking, "Carrickfergus," teams Hinely with his Glasnorts partner and brother, Donal, on vocals and guitar. This time the glasses play backup to the guitar, but the combination works wonderfully – the two sounds are so distinct that each one enhances the other. Donal's vocals, too, seem to fit right in, conveying just the right degree of drunken melancholy on lyrics like "And I'm drunk today/And I'm seldom sober/A handsome rover/From town to town." A real gem, as good or better than any other version out there.

"Joshua Tree" is another original composition that works much in the same way as "Carrickfergus." This time, though, Terry joins Donal on guitar and vocals, while leaving the glass harmonica to David Gentry. The result is a more aggressive sound than most other Glasnorts songs, although the song retains the unconventional lyrics the Hinely's favor: "Joshua tree, Joshua tree/Won't you come and hang with me/I don't know what the shamans say/But I love the view this way."

Glasnorts' arrangements lend themselves to a kind of wistful sadness, and that's taken full advantage of on many of the tracks. "Onion Field" carries weepy tones, with clever metaphors of life repeating themselves in different forms throughout the song: "Living in an onion field/You got to learn to cry/Never going to keep your eyes dry."

Not quite folk, and not quite traditional, Glasnøts had created a sound wholly unique unto itself. Without a doubt, the loss of Terry Hinely was felt most acutely by his family, his brother, his wife and daughter. But music lost a great contributor as well, a distinctive artist with a distinctive sound. Re-Elect The Moon just goes to show what we'll all be missing.
