Rites today for arson investigator Byron Bryson

Services will be at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at Brown's Memorial Chapel in Irving for arson investigator and former Irving police officer Byron Bryson.

Mr. Bryson, 48, died Saturday at Baylor Medical Center in Irving of complications from a series of medical problems he'd suffered since September. He will be buried in Oak Grove Memorial Gardens in Irving.

Born in Harrison, Ark., Mr. Bryson moved to Dallas with his family as a teenager. After graduating from Sunset High School and El Centro College, Mr. Bryson was an air rescue specialist with the Air Force.

In 1974, Mr. Bryson joined the Irving Police Department, where he was a patrolman before becoming a detective, said his wife, Drena Bryson of Irving. Mr. Bryson worked as a detective on a fire investigation, an experience that led him to his next career.

In 1981, Mr. Bryson left the Irving police to work for INS Investigation Services of Dallas, an arson investigation firm.

About five years ago, he founded his own arson investigation firm, Fire Investigation and Remains Evaluation, or FIRE, Ms. Bryson said.

With both companies, Mr. Bryson would investigate the causes of fires for insurance companies. His reports were so carefully prepared that federal agencies often used his reports to show how an arson should be documented, Ms. Bryson said.

An entrepreneur, Mr. Bryson had recently founded another Irving business, Junior Dragster World. The speed shop built scaled-down drag racers, about the size of a go-cart, Ms. Bryson said.

Mr. Bryson was a member of the International Arson Association and the North Texas Fire Investigators.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Bryson is survived by three sons, Cody William Bryson of Irving, Clint Shannon Bryson of Coppell and Chad Edward Ramsey of Athens, Texas; a daughter, Melissa Jean Bryson of Irving; his mother, Trudy Cunningham of Irving; a sister, Cindy Bird of Corinth; a brother, Mac Bryson of Rayne, La.; and three grandchildren.
