Scott Alan Higgins

Scott Alan Higgins, 28, of Flower Mound died Thursday, Jan. 7. He worked in Irving.
Officer found dead after apparent suicide

Victim was the subject of investigation.

By STEPHEN TERRY
News Staff Writer

An Irving police officer's body was found early Thursday in Flower Mound, a day after he failed a lie-detector test concerning $300 taken from a lost wallet turned in to police, officials said.

Officer Scott Higgins, 28, was found dead with an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound, police officials said. According to police, his wife found his body in his truck at a park near Grapevine Lake in Flower Mound.

Lt. Terry Zettle, a member of the Irving police internal-affairs division, said his office was conducting an investigation into a Dec. 29 incident in which two people delivered a lost wallet with $800 to the police station.

"(The wallet) was found in a parking garage of the Las Colinas urban district," Zettle said. "When the people brought it down, there was no one in the property room to check it in. After hours, officers handle items brought in."

Police said Higgins filed a report indicating $500 was in the lost wallet. However, when the owner of the wallet came to the station to pick it up, $300 was reported.

Suicide: Officer had failed polygraph

"The complainants submitted a polygraph test, which they passed." Zettle said. "The officer took a polygraph test Jan. 6, which he failed. After the exam was over, the sergeant was talking to him about the failed test, and (Higgins) admitted to taking the money.

"The sergeant told him (Wednesday) to go home and anticipate a call the next morning and meeting with the chief to discuss the incident. Around 2 a.m. (Thursday), ... I received a call saying Officer Higgins was found in a park in Flower Mound. He was dead."

Information regarding the inquiry into the three-year Irving officer’s action was scheduled to be delivered to the Irving police chief for further action. Department officials said they do not know if the failed polygraph results would have resulted in Higgins’ dismissal.

"Officer Higgins was a very good officer," Zettle said. "I can’t speak for the fact-finding body. We would have forwarded it to the chief, and he would have determined the disciplinary action. There was nothing in his internal-affairs file prior to this incident."

Chief Lowell Cannaday said Friday he could not say if the officer’s actions would have resulted in his dismissal.

"It’s not fair for me to answer because he was not able to respond," Cannaday said. "I always give the officer an opportunity to respond."

Higgins worked as an officer with the Bedford police department for two years prior to working in Irving.

"He was an extremely hard working employee," Cannaday said. "He was well liked. He has received numerous commendations during his three years here."
