Man jumps from van, dies

Argument with woman ends with leap onto Belt Line

By STEPHEN TERRY
News Staff Writer

A 35-year-old Irving man jumped from a moving vehicle to his death Sunday following an argument with the driver, according to police reports.

Trent R. Young was transported to Parkland Memorial Hospital, where he died from injuries sustained in the incident.

Police said Young and an unidentified 35-year-old woman were traveling northbound in the 5000 block of S. Belt Line Road about 6:15 p.m. when an argument ensued. During the spat, Young opened the passenger-side door of the maroon 1991 Dodge van and leaped out.

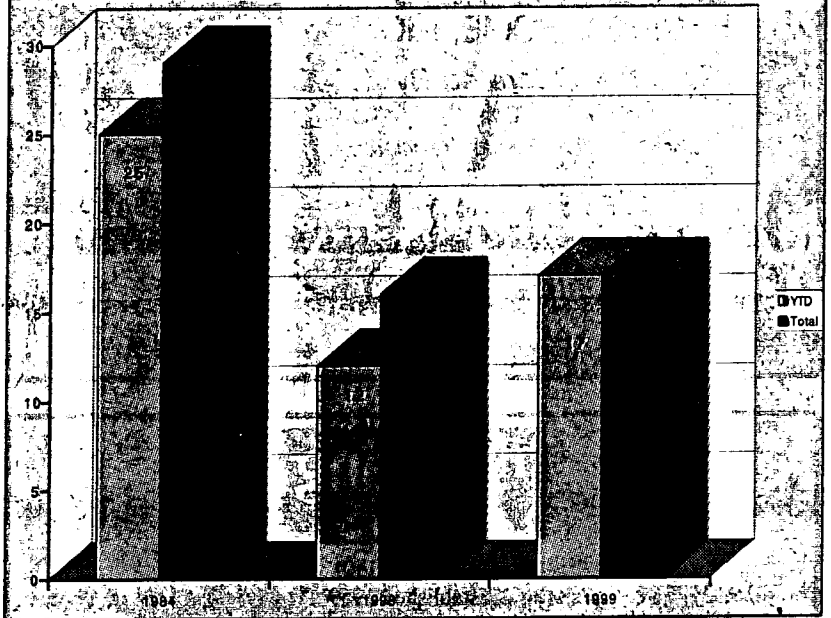

"They were arguing, and he just jumped out," said David Tull, Irving police public information officer. "The vehicle was traveling between 30 and 40 mph. There was light traffic on the road during that time. Another vehicle was behind him, but when he jumped out, he jumped far enough on the shoulder out of traffic."

Police said they do not know how the deadly argument started.

"We do know they were acquaintances, but they were not married," Tull said. "The driver of the van stopped immediately when Young jumped out. There are no
