Teacher, engineer Mae Myers, 92, known for her work in genealogy

By BARRIE PAGE HILL

Mae Estelle Meyers of Irving, known for her work in genealogy and the descendant of Texas pioneers, died Tuesday. She was 92.

“She tied me to my family like no one else ever has,” said Lucinda Schaffer of Hillsboro, Ore., whose father was Miss Meyers’ first cousin.

“She loved knowledge. She loved past, present, and she wanted us all to live for the future and be greater than we thought we could be,” Mrs. Schaffer said. “One of the best things about her was her ability to encourage.”

Miss Meyers’ great-grandfather, Friederich Meyers, and his wife, Rosina Fuchs, came to Texas in 1846 from Germany. Mr. Meyers’ father, Charles Meyers, came to Texas in 1836 and had a land lot on the Salado.

Miss Meyers was born Nov. 26, 1918, in Cameron, Texas. She moved to Irving in 1958 and was a member of St. Luke’s Catholic Church.

She was valedictorian of A&M Consolidated High School in College Station. She attended Rice University on a full scholarship and graduated in 1930. She received a master’s from the University of Texas at Austin in 1933.

Miss Meyers taught school in Dayton, Texas, for five years. She then attended Temple University in Philadelphia and Stella Elkins Tyler Art School.

In 1943, she entered the Navy WAVES program. She taught air navigation at Naval Training Command in Pensacola, Fla. When World War II ended, Miss Meyers remained in the reserve program and retired as a lieutenant commander.

In 1946, she studied at the Art Students League in New York. She then entered Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons at Presbyterian Medical Center and graduated in 1952 as a registered occupational therapist.

She also worked for Chance Vought Aircraft where she trained newly hired engineers. In 1959, Miss Meyers became a technical designer in paving design for the city of Dallas Public Works Department, a position she held until retiring in 1973. She was responsible for the engineering design of the Houston-Ross Avenue connection.

Miss Meyers was involved in a number of women’s hereditary organizations and was a member of American Legion Post 218 and VFW Post 8962.

A member of American Business Women’s Association, she was named one of the nation’s top 10 women in business in 1970.

Beginning a new career in 1977, Miss Meyers became a private secretary for Caroline Gordon, a writer in residence at the University of Dallas. In a novel titled The Sacred Grave, Miss Meyers wrote about her experiences with Miss Gordon under the pen name Marion Lewis. The book was published last year.

“She didn’t settle for anything less than the very best. She recognized people’s potential more than anything,” said Helen Widener, who shared a 30-year friendship and a love of genealogy with Miss Meyers.

Miss Meyers encouraged Mrs. Widener to complete a history of her family. “She wouldn’t let you be other than the best you can be. She was a teacher to the very end.”

Visitation and a rosary for Miss Meyers were held Friday. Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated Saturday at the Chapel of the Incarnation at the University of Dallas, followed by a committal service at Chriesman Cemetery in Chriesman, Texas.

Longtime resident
John Morris dies

By Harriet L. Blake
Staff Writer

John Morris, who died Tuesday, was “all West Texas” according to his son. “There was no grey area between right and wrong, as far as he was concerned,” Gary Morris said. “He set a perfect example for my sister Rebecca and for me, as well as for our children.”

Mr. Morris, 86, was a second-generation Czech who grew up in the West Texas town of Bomarton. “Dad never knew how to tell a joke,” his son said, “but he could break you up with his deadpan stories of his early youth.”

He recalled a story about his father playing football in Bomarton. “Many a time the Bomarton boys did not have enough shoes and would trade out going on and off the field for a football game. In some cases, they would cut the end of the shoe out for the bigger boys,” he said.

Harry Spencer, who had known the elder Mr. Morris since the mid-1950s, said that his friend “was always doing something, was always on his feet.”

Born on Oct. 4, 1914, to Steven and Ana Morris, John Morris graduated from Bomarton High School in 1931 and attended North Texas State Teachers’ College, where he majored in art. He married Johnnie L. Davenport, a fellow student, in 1938. During the early part of World War II, he worked in Houston as a shipwright.

The Morrices moved to Irving in 1947. Here, he started his own business, John Morris Advertising, in 1957. About 20 years later, he sold it and went into the advertising specialty business, Morris Specialties. He was still working in the business at the time of his death, according to friend and city archivist Jan Hart.

Mr. Morris was a member of the First United Methodist Church for more than 50 years. He was active in the Irving Rotary Club, where he was president in 1959 and 1960. He was president of the Chamber of Commerce from 1965 to 1966.

His son said that his father’s biggest thrill was receiving an award from the Irving school district for his work with special-education students. “He loved them dearly and seldom missed their Thursday lunches.”
Morris

Lois M. Morris, 48, a lifetime resident of Dallas, died Saturday at Doctor's Community Hospital in Ennis.

She was a member of Pleasant Grove Baptist Church.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Monday in Ben F. Brown Chapel. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery.

Survivors include her husband, James S. Morris of Dallas, mother, Vida Moore of Irving, brother, Wayne F. Brenson of Carlsbad, N.M., and sisters, Margaret Mauldin and Joyce Shults, both of Irving.
