Peggy Oliver

Peggy Jean Perry Oliver, 75, of Carrollton, a local leader in historical documentation and preservation, died Saturday.

Mrs. Oliver was born Feb. 10, 1926, and was a great-granddaughter of A.W. and Sarah Perry, who came to the area in 1844 and were among the Peters colonists who settled the Carrollton-Trinity Mills area. She was a 1943 graduate of Carrollton High School. She retired in 1988 from E.F. Hauserman Co.

Her investigation of her family history started her interest in genealogical research. The interest became a passion and expanded to a body of research that included many families and occupied much of her time for more than 30 years, filling three rooms of her house and a computer, her family said.

She was a founding member of the Peters Colony Historical Society and of the Carrollton Historical Preservation Commission and was active in other local civic organizations. For many years she was editor and a frequent contributor to Elm Fork Echoes, the official publication of the Peters Colony Historical Society.

Former Carrollton Mayor Milburn Gravley said he regarded Mrs. Oliver as the "official historian" of Carrollton. Friends often turned to her for help with genealogical research, and she was the author of many applications for Texas Historical Commission markers in Carrollton, Farmers Branch, Coppell, Grapevine, Denton and Dallas. She was instrumental in the founding of the A.W. Perry Homestead Museum, and she served on the boards of the Carrollton Public Library and the Perry Cemetery Association.

She is survived by her husband of 51 years, Edward D. Oliver; daughter, Fancy Tanner; son, Joe Oliver; granddaughters, Deanna McDearmont and Catherine Oliver; and great-grandchildren, Ryan and Kaitlyn McDearmont.

Graveside service was Tuesday at Perry Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Carrollton Public Library.
