

Yarborough, Liz

Yarborough, LIZ Elizabeth Ann Yarborough died Dec. 14, 2003, at the young age of 46. Memorial services were held 2 p.m. Saturday at The First Unitarian Church, 4015 Normandy Ave., Dallas, Texas 75205. Memorials: In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to The Nature Conservancy, 4245 N. Fairfax Dr., Suite. 100, Arlington, Va. 22203. Born in Tulsa, Okla., she spent almost all of her life in Texas, where she graduated from Irving High School, then earned her B.A. from Stephen F. Austin State University. After a period of time in banking, she joined the Lockheed Martin Corporation in Grand Prairie and had an 18-year career there as a software engineer. Liz worked in several engineering areas, developing into a highly valued and respected part of every program to which she was assigned. Her work as a software quality engineer earned her recognition as she became a vital part of the PAC-3 Missile Program and ultimately senior quality engineer on that program. Lockheed Martin employees demonstrated how many lives she had touched and how sorely she will be missed by having a memorial service of their own on December 22. Liz also had a secondary career that was her avocation. She was a sales consultant for the well-known Longaberger Basket Company in Ohio for 10 years, widening her circle of friends even more. Liz enjoyed a variety of other pursuits beyond her working life including developing her talent for needlework such as counted cross-stitch, drawnwork, crochet and knitting. Family members and friends were often the lucky recipients of beautiful pieces of her work. She became an accomplished scuba diver and spent as much time as possible indulging that passion, especially in Cozumel, a favorite spot. Survivors: Parents, Taylor and Ralph Posch; sister, Leslie Yarborough Eschen and husband, Mark; nephews, Nicholas and Carson Eschen; David F. Yarborough; brother, Russell Posch and wife, Suzi; aunt, Sylvia Taylor Lerch; cousins, Robert, David, Michael with wife, Julie Taylor; and many other loving family members and friends.
