friend of the arts, will be honored during a Moment of Reflection on Sunday, June 29 at 2:30 p.m., in the Irving Arts Center’s Dupree Theater. The memorial presentation is open to the public.

Harmon, an Irving resident since 1964, passed away in November 2007, leaving behind a legacy as a champion for the arts in Irving. She was involved in the formation of the City of Irving’s Arts Board in 1980 and later served on the Board from 1994-1996. In 1991, Harmon received the Irving High Spirited Citizen award for her volunteerism and support of the arts.

“Jody was an unrelenting advocate for the arts or any other cause that she believed in,” said Mary Higbie, a close friend of Harmon. “It was never about her, but about something she felt would be good for Irving. We have all benefited from Jody’s tireless efforts.”

One of Harmon’s biggest loves and accomplishments was the development of Metro Players, a family-oriented theater group. In addition to her behind-the-scenes work with the organization, she successfully organized an international cultural exchange between Metro Players and the Theater-on-Podol from Ukraine. Each organization traveled to one another’s countries to perform for the local citizens.

Several other organizations also benefited from Harmon’s support. She often assisted with costuming for local theater groups and even taught a makeup and costuming class at Lee Park Recreation Center.

Harmon had a love for performing as well, and she often found herself in the spotlight. She entertained two generations of children as “Jody the Clown” and often performed at birthday parties, civic events and even the Cotton Bowl Parade. Harmon also had an eye for the big screen and appeared in small parts in several commercials, TV shows and movies including Dallas, Corky, Semi Tough and Crisis at Central High.

In remembrance of Harmon, a stepping stone will be placed in the Dupree Theater courtyard. Friends wishing to make donations toward the stepping stone memorial can contact the Irving Arts Center’s box office at (972) 252-ARTS.

For more information about the memorial presentation, contact the Irving Arts Center at (972) 252-7558. The Irving Arts Center is located at 3333 N. MacArthur Blvd, one mile north of Highway 183 on MacArthur in Irving.

Irving resident Ruby Norice Hodges died of complications from cancer at the age of 81 on Friday, October 5, 2007. She had lived in Irving for 53 years. Ms. Hodges was born March 31, 1926 in Terrell, Texas the third child of Omar and Jessie Lee Zink. The family moved to Dallas during the Great Depression. She graduated from Crozier Technical High School in 1944 and began working for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company shortly thereafter. In 1945 she married her childhood sweetheart, Eugene Edward Hodges, while he was on leave from service in the Navy during WWII. In 1954 the young couple moved to Irving, where they raised two children. Following her divorce in 1977, Ms. Hodges managed exclusive apartment properties in Dallas for several years, and then took up a career tailoring suits for Graham’s, an upscale men’s clothing store, until her retirement in 1992.

Ruby Hodges had a remarkable spirit and zest for life. Her warm sense of humor, thoughtfulness, generosity and fun-loving personality won her many life-long friends. She was exceptionally talented and excelled in sewing, knitting, quilting, crochet, upholstery, and stuffed animal creations. While she used this talent to make a living for many years, she preferred to create beautiful and unique pieces that were essentially works of art as gifts for her friends and family.

Ruby Hodges battled lung cancer for more than five years, but through great determination and toughness she carried on with a full and rich life right through her final days. In her last year of life, she made nearly 2000 rosaries for a Catholic missionary and relief organization.
