Mr. Johnson, 48, died Sunday of pancreatitis at Baylor All Saints Medical Center in Fort Worth.

Brett Johnson, a veteran TV reporter in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, died Sunday after a sudden illness. He was 48. The Fort Worth native had worked for KXAS-TV (Channel 5) for 13 years. He previously reported for KDFW-TV (Channel 4) in Dallas and at stations in Waco, Wichita Falls and Oklahoma City. Johnson enjoyed finding stories off the beaten path, especially about all things Texas.

He made his home in Fort Worth, the same city where he was born and raised, and seemed to know everyone.

As a reporter, Brett embraced Texas culture. It was no secret he felt more comfortable wearing a cowboy hat than a suit and tie.

Over the years, he covered everything from hurricanes to crime, but his proudest achievement was reporting on feature stories, especially anything related to music. Homespun Texas affairs were his favorites.

He interviewed some of the biggest names in country music, including Willie Nelson and ZZ Top.

One of his favorite stories took him to Luckenbach, the tiny Texas town made famous in the song "Waltz Me Back Home" by Willie Nelson and ZZ Top.

He started playing the guitar as a teenager, and he brought along with him to Luckenbach, where he performed at a local bar.

"The great thing about Luckenbach is that it has a country feel to it," he said, before playing a song with two locals.

Some of Brett Johnson's Favorite Reports:
- Fort the Love of Luckenbach
- Hall of Fame Texas Style Bar-hopping
- South by Southwest
- Cadillac Lake
- Enchanted Rock
- ZZ Top
- Riding the Rails with Dan Ventur

Whatever he was covering, Brett always managed to find the interesting oddities of life in North Texas. Along the way, he introduced us to the quirky characters he met.

Many viewers will remember Brett's five demonstrations on how to deep fry a turkey for Thanksgiving, a segment so popular he did it for eight straight years.

When he wasn't working, Brett loved life to the fullest. He enjoyed fishing, Texas lakes and watching the Cowboys score a victory.
