In death, Lancaster firefighter gives life

LANCASTER — A Lancaster firefighter who dedicated his life to saving others continues to save lives — even after his own death.

It is Joel Otwell's legacy of giving for a man who had everything to live for.

Family and friends are still mourning Otwell's recent death. He was a devoted firefighter and husband who always put others first.

His dying wish didn't stray from that philosophy; he wanted to keep saving lives.

"He was just an incredible husband and soulmate; very, very sweet," said Valerie Otwell, his wife of almost 10 years. "I will miss him dearly. He gave unconditional love."

She said that love went beyond their home. Joel Otwell gave 21 years to the Lancaster Fire Department; it was his passion.

"Everywhere I go, people stop me and say he was such a good man, and he was. He just cared about people and being a fireman was perfect for him, because he loved helping people," Valerie Otwell said.

Nearly two months ago, Joel Otwell told his wife that he wanted to be an organ donor.

"I told him, 'I don't know, I don't know,' but he said, 'You can save lives.' And then it ended there," Valerie Otwell recalled.

It was a decision she never expected to face so soon.

Three weeks ago, the 49-year-old died after falling at his church.

In death, he saved five lives.

His heart went to West Texas; his kidneys saved two North Texans; and his organs saved two lives out of state.

Otwell's wife is proud of her husband's final gift — a legacy that lives on within the recipients. And Valerie Otwell has a message for them:

"It came at a great cost, so please take care of your gift."

Donations to a special trust fund can be made in memory of Joel Otwell at any Chase bank branch.

LANCASTER - It was with heavy hearts on Monday that Lancaster first responders gathered to remember one of their own.

Funeral services took place for Joel Otwell, a devoted firefighter for the last 21 years, at the Denton Bible Church.

It was the second time in a month that Lancaster is saying goodbye to one of its finest first responders.

Otwell, 49, died of a head injury suffered last week while off duty at church.

Today, he was remembered as the firefighter, paramedic, driver and engineer everyone wanted to be.

As his partner on the force told us, you could always count on Otwell to save lives and to be mischievous. He loved to make everyone laugh.

He never hesitated for a moment to say whom he was devoted to most - Valerie, his wife.

He was equally committed to his family at home, and on the job.

"He was a leader. He set the example, everyone looked up to him, and he's going to be sorely missed," said battalion chief William Rhodes.

"We worked together and he would come out on calls with us, medical calls, and accidents, and you kind of get to know these guys a bit and talk to them, as you go through the department and such, and he was a good man," said Lt. Kelly Hooten, from the Lancaster police department.

Donations can be made in memory of Joel Otwell at any Chase bank; a special trust fund has been set up.

It was just a month ago, that Lancaster lost their first police officer killed in the line of duty, Craig Shaw. One of the first to respond was Otwell.
