Dr. George Susat | Visit Guest Book

Susat, Dr. George Dr. George Susat, retired Orthopedic Surgeon, former Irving City Councilman, US Air Force Captain, 32nd Degree Mason, Rotarian, Environmentalist, Dr. George Susat was an Irving icon. Dr. Susat passed away at his Irving home on June 30 after a lengthy illness. George Carl Gustave Susat was born December 30, 1926, in Cook County, Illinois. His parents, Olga and Max Susat, came to the United States in the 1920's as immigrants from a Germany ravaged by privation. George never forgot his parents' stories of Europe after WW I, and in the ensuing years, he developed a strong sense of history and an observation of the world around him. George Susat graduated from Northwestern University in Chicago with a degree in Biology and Botany. He then graduated from Northwestern Medical School as an M. D. and orthopedic specialist and began his practice after service in the US Air Force Medical Corps. He came to Irving in 1960 to open a private practice. He served as an orthopedic surgeon and operated the Bone and Joint Clinic on N. O'Connor until his retirement in 1998. He was a member of the Texas Orthopedic Association, the Western Orthopedic Association, US College of Orthopedic Surgeons, and the Dallas County Medical Society. Dr. Susat devoted much of his life to his dual commitments to history and to the environment. He was an environmentalist before the term was widely understood. He saw beautification as a necessary part of a clean and healthy environment. In that pursuit in 1971 he spearheaded a successful tree planting initiative for the new Texas Stadium. He also secured the planting of hundreds of trees along the City's major thoroughfares. As a Rotarian he sponsored the tree giveaways that placed thousands of trees in Irving residents' yards. He proposed tree and landscape installations as a member of the Irving Parks Board, and as a City Councilman was successful in securing the designation of the crepe myrtle as the official Irving tree. He worked with the City's Centennial Committee to support the planting of hundreds of Centennial crepe myrtles. He worked with Dallas County Flood Control District President, Bob Nelson, Sr. to plant trees in the district as both erosion control and beautification, then helped Mr. Nelson secure approval for his proposal to plant memorial trees in Irving's Centennial Park. On a national level, Dr. Susat served with former First Lady, Ladybird Johnson in her project to beautify Texas highways with native wildflowers. His environmentalism extended into other areas. He became an expert on landfills and recycling. After joining fellow City Council candidates Sharon Barbosa and Jack Spurlock in a proposal for recycling in Irving, Dr. Susat worked diligently to see the goal accomplished. He served as Board member for Keep Irving Beautiful and in 2005 was awarded the O.P. Schnabel Senior Citizen Award for lifetime service in environmental activities. Dr. Susat also loved history and travel. He and his wife, Carol, were charter members of the Irving Heritage Society. They helped initiate the annual Bracebridge Dinner, a celebration of Irving's connection to Washington Irving. They also donated a beautiful bust of the famous author to the Irving Library. Dr. Susat's travels are legendary. He visited every corner of the world, sometimes alone, sometimes in the company of dear friends such as Ben Thomas and Gerald Stavely. He located relatives still living in Europe and developed an ongoing relationship that enriched them all. Dr. Susat's service to Irving included the Irving City Council from 1990-1998, where he served as mayor pro tem, and led in areas of recycling, beautification, water resources, landfill operations, and parks. Prior to that he served on the Parks Board. In addition to the O.P. Schnabel Award, Dr. Susat was a recipient of numerous awards and recognitions. One of his fondest was being in the first group of Irving High Spirited Citizen Awards in 1988. Dr. Susat was as well known for his personality and behavior as for his community service. George Susat was an extremely large man whose manner was completely at odds with his imposing appearance. He was an unfailingly gentle and kind man and his relationship with his patients was one of compassion and understanding. He was a cheerful man who often poked fun at himself. Dr. Susat's most enduring love was for his wife, the former Carol Berry, a lifelong Irving resident. Carol, a former nurse, is admired for her numerous civic activities and philanthropies, including her leadership in developing the City's Family Advocacy Center, activities which her loving husband, George Susat actively supported. In addition to Carol, George is survived by his son George Susat, Jr. and wife Paula of Waxahachie, daughters C. A. Susat of Seattle, Washington, and Susan Powell of Irving; and 5 grandchildren. George Susat liked to quote a phrase coined by an old friend because it expressed his feeling of how he believed we should view the world and our place in it: "Think globally. Act locally." Dr. George Susat, our friend and our neighbor, did that, and so inspired us all to do the same. Funeral services will be held at 10 AM Monday, July 5, 2010 at Oak View Baptist Church, 1004 S. Story Rd. in Irving. Interment will follow at Oak Grove Memorial Gardens. The family will receive friends 2-4 PM Sunday at Brown's Memorial Funeral Home Chapel. Memorial donations may be made to Irving Family Advocacy Center, 600 W. Pioneer Dr., Irving, TX 75061.
