Update on Legislative Insider Program

City Council Work Session

November 9, 2023
Marketing Campaign Outline

• 12-month series beginning in November 2023 that highlights legislative proposals that interfered with local government’s ability to serve its residents
• The goal is to get residents involved by identifying state actions that restrict city actions or impose requirements on city procedures
• Will reference outside media, interest groups and use audio, video for some articles
Examples

- Lead with reference to taped conversation involving the former Speaker and another legislator talking about how they “hate cities and counties.” – Dallas Morning News
- Pre-emption (HB 2127) – Dallas Morning News
- Zoning and development restrictions
- Elimination of teen curfew
- Fee reductions (telecom, cable)
Examples

• Attempt to limit enforcement of noise restrictions
• Attempts to eliminate fees tied to apartment inspections
• Effort to keep city officials from participating in legislative discussions

Irving Legislative Insider Pulls Back Curtain on State Legislation Impacting the Community

Protecting Irving Resident Interests from State Attacks on Local Authority

Over the years, the Texas Legislature has increased efforts to diminish local control by limiting the city's ability to make decisions in the best interest of the community. The city-state relationship has changed drastically with state-level preemptive legislation and decisions that negatively impact municipalities. Irving's ability to govern and provide essential municipal and community services has been hindered by state legislation that takes a one-size-fits-all approach.

Since 2015, about 25 percent of all bills filed affected cities. For the most recent 88th Legislative Session, that number was more than 2,000 bills.

Hostility toward local governments came into full view in 2019, after legislators attempted to pass a bill that would keep cities and counties from advocating for themselves in the legislature. The sitting Speaker of the House Dennis Bonnen was recorded in a meeting with State Representative Dustin Burrows saying they “hate” cities and counties and promising the next session would be even worse than the last.

Resident awareness and involvement are key to protecting and maintaining the safety, finances, and quality of life for each individual who lives in Irving. Irving Legislative Insider is a public awareness campaign to educate residents about the negative impacts some state legislation has on communities.
